

COUNCIL MET ON MONDAY NIGHT

BY-LAW PASSED FOR RAISING MONEY BY DEBENTURE — ROUTINE BUSINESS

The regular monthly meeting of the Stirling Village Council was held in the Council Chamber on Monday evening, with Reeve Cranston in the chair and all the members of the Council present.

Following the reading and approval of the minutes, communications were tabled from the Martin Funeral Home, of Belleville, concerning ambulance service to a local resident, and from Mrs. H. H. Alger, acknowledging the Council's expression of sympathy at the time of the death of Dr. Alger.

With respect to an account from the Martin Funeral Home, Reeve Cranston stated the service was not authorized by himself, any member of the Council or the M.O.H. It was a matter for the members of Council to decide. Councillor Anderson gave it as his opinion that in times of illness it was not always possible to wait until permission had been received from the village officials, and favoured the payment of the account. The other members of Council concurred and the account, amounting to $8.00 was ordered paid.

The following accounts, as passed by the various committees were ordered paid on motion of Councillors Eggleton and Stapley.

Reeve Cranston reported that a communication had been received from Mr. Chas. Cameron, M.P., advising that the Postal Department had selected the Matthews property for the site of the new Post Office.

It was moved by Councillor Rollins, seconded by Councillor Anderson, that Council approve the department's selection of a site for the post office.

A report from the General Accident Insurance Co. on the inspection of the boiler in the Community Building was received and filed on motion of Councillors Anderson and Eggleton.

The question of fencing the property on which the new well is situated created a lengthy discussion as to whether the fence would completely encircle the lot or be on three sides only. It was finally decided to adopt the latter plan, and the Property Committee was authorized to purchase the material and have the work completed.

A matter of settling with Wm. Fitch over the disposal of several planks was left in the hands of Councillor Stapley.

Speaking for the cemetery committee, Councillor Eggleton stated there was need of new posts for the fence on the south side running from the street east as far as the water tower. The cemetery committee was authorized to purchase new posts and have the work finished.

The sidewalk on Mill St. east of James St., was reported in need of repairs in several places and the Street Committee were authorized to have the matter looked after.

E. J. Gazeley, Belleville, interviewed Council relative to having the exterior of the water tower repainted, but it was decided to leave this matter in abeyance until next spring.

Reeve Cranston stated he had been approached by members of the Gospel Hall Tabernacle congregation relative to having the sidewalk raised in front of the church now under course of construction on the south side of Front Street. Council was not in favour of doing anything at this time and the matter will be left over for next year's Council to consider.

A request from the same source for permission to connect a drain from the new building to one on the west side of the Community Hall was left until members of Council had an opportunity to view the layout.

Anniversary Held

Every year in every denomination comes one particular occasion when the members and adherents celebrate the reaching of another milestone in the history of that institution. Therefore it was most gratifying to those in charge of the arrangements for the celebration of the eighty-second anniversary of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Stirling, to have friends from all parts of this community join with the members in worship at the special services on Sunday last.

The guest minister, Rev. M. E. R. Boudreau, B.D., S.T.D., of Picton, delivered two inspiring sermons. Special music was rendered by the choir, including a solo "Jesus Lover of My Soul," by Arthur Duncan, and the anthem, "The Lord is the Light."

At the evening service the congregation of St. Paul's United Church joined the Presbyterian congregation for service and the church was well filled. Special numbers offered by the choir included an anthem "Praise His Name," a quartette, "Just as I am," by Mr. and Mrs. Roy Eggleton, Mrs. Chas. Fargoy and Arthur Duncan, and a solo "Bless This Home," by A. Duncan.

Throughout the entire services of both morning and evening, Mrs. R. H. Williams presided at the console of the organ, which was augmented by the use of the piano, with Miss Grace Pitman, of Stirling, presiding.

Anniversary Dinner

Over three hundred members of the congregation and friends gathered at St. Andrew's Church on Tuesday evening for the chicken dinner given by the ladies of the church in connection with the celebration of the anniversary. Supper was served in the church parlours from 5.30 to 7.30, and was followed by an interesting program of musical numbers and readings, with Mr. Arthur Duncan acting as chairman.

SCHOOLS ARE CLOSED

Students of Stirling Public School are enjoying a holiday Thursday and Friday due to the convention of the Teachers of Centre Hastings which is being held in Tweed. All members of the local public school staff will attend both Thursday and Friday sessions, while Principal Good, of the High School, is expected to attend the Friday afternoon session.

A THRESHING RECORD

A record for threshing for this district was established at the farm of Mr. George Bailey, at Harold, on Monday, when 2122 bushels of grain were threshed in 10 hours. The mill, which is owned by Mr. Theodore Cooney, of Rawdon, was powered by an international tractor.

Rifles Are Recovered

After several weeks' investigation, Chief of Police S. Eggleton, on Monday, recovered two B.S.A. rifles stolen from the Stirling High School during the summer vacation; also a revolver which was stolen from a local residence. The rifles were found hidden under some brush at the rear end of the T. Spry farm. Two local juveniles are implicated and full details of the case have been laid before the provincial police authorities at Belleville by Chief Eggleton.

The Property Committee was authorized to have the front door and steps of the Public Library repaired; also a ventilator installed in the municipal vault, on motion of Councillors Eggleton and Rollins.

On motion of Councillors Eggleton and Anderson Reeve Cranston was appointed to buy wood and supplies for citizens on relief, and fuel for the Community Buildings.

Bandmaster Maurice Bell interviewed Council relative to securing the use of the theatre for entertainments to raise funds for the Band. On motion of Councillors Stapley and Eggleton, the Band was granted use of the theatre free of charge for two engagements before Dec. 31st of this year.

Councillor Rollins introduced a by-law to raise the sum of $1500 by debenture for completion of the High School, and after receiving its various readings was passed.

Council adjourned to meet again on Wednesday morning.

Lindsay Meiklejohn

Stirling and district has lost one of its most highly-esteemed citizens in the death of Lindsay Meiklejohn, who passed away on Thursday, September 29th, in his 83rd year, following an illness of about ten weeks. Active in all departments of the community life he was widely known as one who was ever ready to support any worthy community enterprise and to assist those in need. His activities had brought him in contact with many who will regret the passing of one so well known and respected.

Lindsay Meiklejohn was born on the 12th concession of Rawdon, the son of Mr. and Mrs. James Meiklejohn on May 24th, 1856, and was one of a family of nine. When a young man he went to Campbellford, where he was employed in the dry goods store of Morton and Irvine. Some sixty-four years ago he came to Stirling, where he entered the employ of Milne and Clute, general merchants, and since that time has been a constant resident of the Village. Later he took over the hardware business operated by his employers, which he conducted for several years prior to taking his nephew, Mr. R. W. Meiklejohn, into partnership. Business was conducted under the firm name of L. and R. W. Meiklejohn until only a few weeks prior to his death, when he purchased the interests of his partner.

As well as being a successful business man, Mr. Meiklejohn found time to devote his talents and energy in the interests of the municipality and for thirty years occupied a position at the Council Board. For two years, 1919-20, he occupied the position of Reeve. During his years of office he contributed much to the development of the village. Possessing a keen and analytic mind, his opinions always carried considerable weight in the deliberations of the village legislators, and he was frequently spoken of as one of the best councillors in the history of the municipality. He also contributed to the material development of the Village in the erection of seven fine residences in addition to the large business block in which the hardware business was connected.

He also took an active interest in other local organizations and was a charter member of Stirling Lodge I.O.O.F. No. 239. He was also a veteran member of Stirling L.O.L. No. 110. Prior to the consummation of Church Union he was a staunch member of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, being superintendent of the Sunday School for over thirty years and a member of the Kirk session. Since becoming a member of St. Paul's United Church, he has continued to take an active interest in its work, serving for a time as Sunday School superintendent, and as a member of

Mr. and Mrs. H. Lamb, Rednersville, Mr. and Mrs. Percy Crouter, of Carrying Place, were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Francis.

Mr. and Mrs. Bill Mastin, of Geraldton returned home on Wednesday after spending the past ten days visiting the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Jones.

Mrs. Will Mather, of Toronto, was a guest of Mrs. Geo. Richards over the week-end and attended the funeral of her uncle, the late Lindsay Meiklejohn on Saturday.

Mr. C. Scott and Mrs. H. Keller spent Sunday in Smithfield guests of Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Gibson. They were accompanied home by Mrs. Scott who had spent the past week visiting her daughter.

Among those from out of town who attended the funeral of the late Lindsay Meiklejohn were Mr. and Mrs. Phil Duggan, Mrs. Will Mather, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Mullen, of Toronto, and Mr. and Mrs. S. Goodrich, Nanawake.

The friends of Miss Helen Fraser, of Glen Ross, will be pleased to learn that she has sufficiently recovered from an operation which she underwent in Belleville Hospital on Wednesday last to return to her home.

Mrs. Geo. Crowe has returned after visiting her daughter, Mrs. Dr. McComb, Toronto, and Mrs. Arthur Ulyott, of Elmira, and is visiting now at the home of her brother, Mr. Wm. J. Hagerman.

P. O. Site Chosen

Months of speculation as to where Stirling's new post office would be situated has been ended with notification being received by the Village Council that the Matthews lot at the corner of North and Charlotte Streets has been chosen for the site. According to the letter from Mr. Chas. Cameron, M.P. for South Hastings, the plans for the new building are being prepared and it is expected that the tenders will be called in the near future.

He married Miss Alfretha Wescott, who predeceased him two years ago. He leaves to mourn a daughter, Mrs. Clifford Hatton, of Stirling; two brothers, Andrew of Centerville, and John of Campbellford, and one sister, Sarah, of Seattle, Wash.

Citizens of every walk of life in Stirling and district united in paying their last respects at the funeral service, which was held in St. Paul's United Church on Saturday afternoon at 2.30. All places of business were closed for the funeral and members of Stirling Lodge I.O.O.F. No. 239, attended in a body and performed the last rites of the Order at the graveside. The service was conducted by Rev. W. J. Scott, minister of St. Paul's, assisted by Rev. E. W. Rowland, of Mark St. United Church, Peterboro, and Rev. Jas. E. Beckel, of Rawdon Circuit. In their addresses both Rev. Scott and Rev. Rowland paid tribute to the devoted manner in which Mr. Meiklejohn had served the Church and to the true Christian principles exemplified by him in all his activities.

During the service the choir rendered an anthem with Mr. G. L. Clute presiding at the organ.

The pallbearers were Messrs Geo. Luery, J. S. Morton, R. W. Meiklejohn, S. Hatton, H. Tulloch and C. F. Linn. Interment was made in Stirling cemetery.

Honoured by Friends

About twenty of her friends and former school mates of S.S. No. 6, Rawdon Township, gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Will Donald, Minto, on Tuesday evening to pay honour to their daughter, Miss Jean Donald, prior to her departure for Kingston, to enter training for a nurse. The early part of the evening was spent in games, after which the gathering was called to order and an illuminated address and an aeropack presented to Miss Donald. The address was read by Miss Irene Tucker and the presentation made by Miss Lela Johnston.

Harold, Ontario, October 4th, 1938

Dear Jean,—

We, your friends and former school-mates have gathered in your home this evening to spend a few hours with you prior to your departure from our midst.

Most of us present were partners in many a lively escapade at our public school and some of us raised the proverbial "Cain" with you at high school. Mixed with these were serious moments in which we as individuals learned to enjoy your fun-loving ways. We congratulate you on your choice of career and are sure that you will make as splendid a nurse as you did a student.

Of course, we do not need to assure you that we will be more than delighted to have you back in our community at any time that that is possible. We hope that happy days and good times may be recalled to you when you use this gift. We ask you to accept it with the assurance that all your former school pals are following your career with interest, are confident of your success and have high hopes for your future.

Signed — Your many friends of S.S. No. 6.

A brief address of thanks and appreciation was made by the guest of honour, following which dainty refreshments were served and a social time spent.

When his shot gun accidentally discharged Saturday afternoon, Clayton Stapley, of Stirling, received the full charge in the right forearm. He was duck hunting in the vicinity of the steel bridge on the town line and had pulled his boat in which his gun was lying, up on shore. While talking to a companion he noticed two ducks flying in his direction and was in the act of pulling his gun from the boat at the time of the accident. Dr. E. A. Carleton, of Stirling, was summoned and gave medical aid to the injured man.

FATALITIES CAN BE AVOIDED

The first hunting accident of the season occurred on Saturday when a young man of the district narrowly missed fatal injuries when a gun which he was dragging from a boat went off and the charge of shot hit him in the arm. Had the gun been tilted in the other direction the full charge of shot would have entered his body, with perhaps fatal results. This should be a lesson to the victim of the accident as well as to hunters in general to take all precautions with fire arms. Year after year numerous fatalities are recorded, all of which could be averted if all who take pleasure in hunting would remember to exercise care. In every case human carelessness is the prime cause of a hunter being killed, maimed, or injured. The prevention is simple. It requires only that those carrying loaded weapons should always remember to stop, look and make sure. Don't walk behind a companion with a cocked gun pointing toward him; don't grab a gun by the muzzle and pull it toward you from a boat, or when crawling under a fence. Until hunters practise the common sense rules of hunting, the annual quota of accidents will continue.

THANKSGIVING SEASON

Monday next, October 10th, has been set aside for the observance of Thanksgiving. As the Thanksgiving season approaches our thoughts should turn to God, the Giver of all good things. What have we for which to be grateful? Far more than many of us realize. Canadians from coast to coast should join in giving thanks that war in Europe, with all its horror and misery and sacrifice of human lives has been averted, and we have settled government and democratic institutions. Business is improving and prices are rising. Those who have been hard hit have kept battling ahead and our leaders are looking forward to an era of prosperity. In addition to causes for national thanksgiving, we have reasons for individual and personal gratitude to the Giver of all Good — Life, health, love, friendship, the daily task and the capacity for doing it, the opportunity for service and the willingness to render it. In these priceless gifts our people are rich and for these, as well as for the material blessings represented by a bountiful harvest, we should be thankful. Monday is the appointed day on which we are asked to uplift heart and voice with thanksgiving.

HALF HOLIDAYS END

Wednesday afternoon of last week was the last half-holiday for the merchants and business men of Stirling, with the exception of the barbers, who are continuing the half-holidays until the end of the present month. Since the first week in May each Wednesday afternoon has been a period of rest and recreation for all who wait upon the purchasers of this district. And it is a fine thing that an arrangement can be made to make it possible for employers and employees to have one afternoon off each week during the summer months. Hard work will not hurt anyone but the old saying that "All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy" is just as applicable in adult life as it was in our youth. The Wednesday closing may have inconvenienced some and again may have meant a slight monetary loss to the merchants, but the benefits accrued in better health and enjoyment by the merchants far exceed any loss in business. Everyone loves and needs a holiday and it is only fair that the business man have his day for recreation or for spending as he sees fit. There are those who criticize the business men for closing their stores in mid-week but as a general thing the public is willing to co-operate with the merchants in their arrangements for a holiday.

During the past summer the weatherman has smiled upon the Wednesday half-holidays, and the business men and their employers have been able to spend the holiday in the open. That they have benefitted both physically and mentally we have no doubt, and as a result will be better prepared for the long winter months.

What Others Say

PHYSICALLY FIT DRIVERS

(Barrie Examiner)

Last week a man died driving a motor car on King's Highway No. 12, near Orillia. Fortunately the car was travelling slowly and stopped undamaged in the ditch. Should the same sort of accident happen in dense, rapidly-travelling traffic such as very often are seen on Highway No. 11, there would be very heavy property damage and probably loss of life. It may not be long before a doctor's certificate of physical fitness will be required before a driving license is issued.

HIGH COST OF DYING

The cost of dying is not thought of so often as the cost of living. But it looms as a major problem for most people. To low-wage earners the

AN ELECTION COMING

With November 12th set at the date for the Conservative Convention to choose a candidate for the riding of Hastings-Peterboro, the political pot is beginning to boil throughout the constituency. It is reported that there are five candidates in the field, with Reeve George E. Thompson, of Rawdon Township, being the only aspirant from the Stirling end of the riding. Other candidates mentioned are T. P. Lancaster, of Havelock, Dr. Lumb of Bancroft, Geo. White, of Madoc, and Dr. A. T. Embury, former Conservative member, now a resident of Ottawa.

Outside of Dr. Embury and T. P. Lancaster, who was Conservative member for Peterboro County in the Ontario Legislature, none of the aspirants have had any parliamentary experience. However, Dr. Lumb, of Bancroft, and Geo. E. Thompson, of Springbrook, are active in municipal politics, being reeve of their respective municipalities, and members of Hastings County Council. Of the five candidates Reeve Thompson is the best known in this district and is highly popular. In the years he has served the ratepayers of Rawdon, first as Councillor and for the past seven years as reeve, he has proven a capable and conscientious legislator. He has also taken a prominent part in the deliberations of County Council, having been a valued member of the county road commission for a number of years, and should he be chosen as the Conservative candidate at the forthcoming convention would undoubtedly put up a strong fight in the next election.

The different Conservative Associations throughout the riding are busy choosing their delegates, the candidates are said to be waging vigorous campaigns and everything points to a keen struggle for the convention's support.

CURRENT COMMENT

The total motor accidents in which children are injured while playing on the streets is appalling, says an exchange, but still more striking is the number of times in which accidents are avoided, either by what appears to be a pure miracle, or by the remarkable efforts on the part of motorists.

Delinquent radio owners received notice through the mails this week that their radio license should be procured at once. Those who have neglected or overlooked renewing their license should do so at once in order to escape the prescribed penalty for operating an unlicensed radio receiving set.

The surrounding country is beautiful just now with the leaves on the trees in all their gorgeous autumn colours. It is worth anyone's while to take a drive along the roadsides, or over the Oak Hills, where a view that is hard to surpass is presented. Stirling is situated in a beautiful location and is accorded many fine compliments by visitors to this section.

Announcement of the site of the Village's new post office is good news to the citizens of Stirling. When a representative of the Postal Department at Ottawa inspected the sites available some weeks ago, it was thought that building operations would commence in due time. But as week after week went by without any official word of where or when work would start there were those who thought that the building of a post office here was only a dream. However, official word from Mr. Chas. Cameron, member for South Hastings, that the site had been selected and tenders will be called for in due course, has dispelled all doubt over the matter and citizens will anxiously await the start of building operations.

Summer is gone and the members of the local sporting organizations have practically completed the year's activities. With the holding of a ladies' doubles tournament on Monday it is expected that activities at the local greens are practically over for another season. The annual baseball classic is attracting attention at present, to be followed by football and then hockey. The students at the local High School have again entered a team in the district inter-scholastic league, but the lack of experienced players is proving a big handicap in competition with the other schools of the district. Two years ago the local school team proved superior to any in their group, going through the season without a defeat, but graduations have made it necessary to practically build a whole team this year. Softball is still being played by the High School girls' team. Of course, there is still no talk of hockey and is not likely to be any until the zero weather arrives. The prospects of Stirling having a team in the Trent Valley League again this year are not too bright, but it is too early to make any predictions in that regard.

cost of burial services constitutes an increasing worry, because they are haunted by the fear of a "pauper's grave." The most common form of industrial insurance is nothing more than burial insurance. Or every insurance policy under $1000 it is found that over half of it is used for funeral expenses. There are cases where funeral directors assume the payments on premiums of policies which are in danger of lapsing. Indeed, the struggle among thousands of people to provide for a decent exit from this life makes their later period of living a harried, unenviable one. — Toronto Star.

PEOPLE WILL TALK

(Leamington Post and News)

You may get through the world, but it will be very slow, if you listen to all that is said as you go. You will be worried and fretted and kept in a stew, for meddlesome tongues must have something to do — And people will talk. If quiet and modest, you'll have it presumed that your humble position is only assumed; you're a wolf in sheep's clothing, or else you're a fool, but don't get excited, keep perfectly cool — For people will talk. And then if you show the least boldness of heart, or a slight inclination to take your own part, they will call you an upstart, conceited and vain, but keep straight ahead, don't stop to explain — For people will talk. If threadbare your dress and old-fashioned your hat, someone will surely take notice of that, and hint rather strongly you can't pay your way. But don't get excited whatever they say — For people will talk. If your dress is in fashion, don't think to escape for they criticize them in a different shape. You're ahead of your means, or your tailor's unpaid. But mind your own business, there's nought to be made — For people will talk.

PROPERTY OWNERS ARE THE GOATS

It is no wonder that real estate values have depreciated tremendously and that the building trades are at a standstill when one considers that practically the entire expense of municipal government and services is charged up against the property owners. The Ontario Real Estate Boards have done some figuring and state while real property in Ontario amounts to only 30 per cent. of the total urban wealth, real estate bears not merely 30 per cent of the burden but an estimated minimum of 50 per cent.

Municipal taxation has, on the average, practically doubled in the past 25 years. This increase has been due to the gradual placing on the municipalities responsibility for automobile traffic, social services, together with the increased cost of higher education as well as of other services. The Real Estate Board has pointed out in a letter to Premier Hepburn that the municipal costs arising out of motor traffic should properly be met out of revenue from motor car and gasoline. It is also suggested that public utilities should be taxed at their present exemption from taxation results in the users being bonused at the expense of the property owners.

The Provincial Government has relieved the situation somewhat by taking over the burden of Old Age Pensions and Mothers' Allowances. What is needed is an equitable shifting of the incidence of taxation so that others besides property owners may contribute their share. — St. Marys Journal-Argus.

SUPPLY AND DEMAND

(Whitby Gazette & Chronicle)

It seems that the price of any article is set by the law of supply and demand. Witness the present price commanded for hogs, which recently was the highest since the close of the Great War. The price is most heartening to the farmer, considering the price being paid for grain, but it is not every farmer who is in a position to "unload" while prices are at their peak. Probably many farmers who scramble to get into the hog raising business when the prices are up will begin to see the wisdom of maintaining a steady production the year round so that when the market is strong they can reap the additional profit. Quality has some bearing on the amount received by the farmer, which means careful feeding and study.

As it has been stated on previous occasions, farming is perhaps the greatest gamble of all. So much depends on the weather and also the market when harvest time rolls around. One can't expect to make money buying at a high price and selling at a low price. Therefore if the farmer holds a batch of hogs too long in anticipation of getting a better price, he is liable to be docked for selling hogs that are overweight. It is best to sell when hogs are ready for market, for it has been proven that even though the supply is limited, it is better to take the price offered than the price less the dockage.

A JEWISH REFUGE HERE?

It is said that a Canadian in Berlin was informed by Herr Hitler himself that the reason we had no Jewish problem in Canada was that the Scot came here first. This comes to mind when one considers that there are hundreds of thousands of Jews who would like to come to Canada and that Canada needs population. With the Scot as a continuing antidote, it might be that we could welcome the Jews in numbers.

If one can set his prejudices aside, it may be admitted that there is much to be said for the Jews as citizens. They eat at the public trough less than any other group in our population. They are seldom accused of crime in this country, although they are perhaps somewhat litigious in civil matters. Thus the overcrowding in the legal profession is mitigated. This writer never recollects encountering a Jewish panhandler. They never seek handouts at sidewalks of Gentile homes and if they appear at all they are at least seeking to buy or sell something. Into this office there never has come an appeal from an organized Jewish charity.

It could hardly be expected that they would till the soil. One gathers from the Old Testament that they were once a pastoral people, but centuries of repression in European countries, when they were forbidden to pass real property to legitimate heirs, may have had much to do with converting them to trade in movables. And if the present trend in succession duties continues, others of the human race eventually will be ingenious enough to die possessed of no tangible wealth.

By contrast, the Jew as an immigrant is much to be preferred to some others in every neighborhood, especially neighborhoods where relief payments are generous. Everyone knows of citizens who came some time ago from the seat of Empire who have never worked and never intend to, if a pungent phrase may be borrowed.

Back in our days as a police reporter in a United States city a murder was to be expected every Saturday in a district inhabited mainly by scions of a race pure Aryan, if such there be. And he it remembered that the still-to, ranking second only to the pistol in the criminal annals of this continent, is a weapon not of the Jews.

Unless one lives only in an area so unfortunate as to possess no Jews, nearly every Gentile knows a Jewish friend or neighbor who is cultured, kindly and independent. Often it may be that the fear and dislike of the Jew is a fear of the stiff competition he can put up — in business, education, music and the arts.

Admitting the Jews would not, of course, solve our railway problem if solving our railway problem depends on settlement on the thin traffic lines. The thin traffic lines are that way in part because the settlers along these lines are not in the best position to progress. Jews would be too smart to let themselves be placed where they had no chance of doing fairly well.

But in other respects it is probable that Jews would help us solve some of our national problems, many of which are due to the fact that we have insufficient population per square mile to pay for the conveniences and luxuries of civilization with which we have so generously provided ourselves. — The Printed Word.

COVERING THE WORLD OF SPORT

Saturday the eastern Canada rugby football wars commenced on two fronts — Interprovincial and Intercollegiate, with the O.R.F.U. senior series games booming out on Thanksgiving Day.

At this time, therefore it behooves to chalk up the prediction as to which grid machine will roll to the front in each of the three senior loops in the East — and which will continue on to the eastern title.

In the Big Four, as the lads term the Interprovincial Union, Toronto Argonauts appear to be the logical choice, despite a disappointing pre-season exhibition against Balmy Beach. The Oarsmen have lost eight of last year's Dominion championship squad including Halfback Johnny Edwards and Snap Reg. Barker. Three things, however, point to the Toronto double blue repeating — Big Bob Isbister's superior kicking, dismemberment of the Montreal Indians of last year who reappear in much weaker form as the Cubs, and the fact that Hamilton Tigers, too, are undergoing a rebuilding process and will field a squad made up in the main of promoted juniors and intermediates. This leaves Ottawa Rough Riders as the only serious opposition for the Argos — and that's where point No. 1 comes in. Isbister's long range cannonading should offset the edge the Riders will undoubtedly hold on the ground. The Ottawans, however, must be rated as second choice due to their power along the line. The tiger youths should come along enough to edge out the Montreal Cubs for third place.

The O.R.F.U. should witness its greatest battle in years, but nothing appears on the grid horizon to say why Sarnia Imperials will not repeat. The mighty Olters have upset two Big Four teams, Ottawa and Hamilton, in practice brushes, and seem safe bets to handle all opposition they will meet in their own circuit, despite a definite loss in the untimely death of Ormond Beach. The new Montreal Nationals who are none other than the Indians or Winged Wheelers of other years gone over to the O.R.F.U. from the Big Four will make things mighty interesting, however, while Balmy Beaches cannot be counted out of the picture by any means. In Ab Box the Beaches have a kicker with few if any superiors, while Teddy Manorek, imported from Hamilton, and a youngster named Sward will give the Blue and Gold their best-balanced backfield in years. Beaches should edge out the Ferraro-coached Montreals for second spot, with the new and untested Peterborough Orfuns being relegated to the cellar.

The college union is always hard to figure. Western U. has looked good in pre- and early-season matches in the past several years, only to fade in the clutch. For that reason the Mustangs despite the appearance of great strength, must be relegated to second on our list, behind University of Toronto. The 10-6 victory of the Blue and White over Beaches last Saturday, after the latter had downed Argos, stamps the U. of T. squad as dangerous in any company. Graduations and scholastic failures have taken on no less than 10 of Teddy Reeve's best men and the Queen's mentor is singing the blues as the opening game approaches. However, an axiom of Canadian gridiron lore is "Never sell a Reeve-coached squad short." If the Tricolour candidates have the makings, Teddy will have them in there at the playoffs. McGill Redmen are counting on the kicking of Westman to give them the power they have lacked in recent years. In Paul Perowne, "the crying quarterback," the Reds have the fightingest, gamest, smartest pivot in the union. Anything is liable to happen in the L.C.U., but we'll go out on a limb to call Varsity, Western, Queens, and McGill in that order.

These predictions give us Argonauts, Sarnia and Toronto Varsity in the eastern playoffs. It really boils down to Argos and Sarnia again — and again, it should be a toss-up right down to the finish. We'll call Argos because in the past they have proved to be the better finishers. But then your choice is just as good as ours!

QUESTIONS DEPT. — What club was the first recognized Dominion rugby football championship winner?

A few years ago when some scientifically-minded gent had the bright idea of analyzing the saliva of a horse to determine whether or not it had been drugged, it was predicted that the day of "doping" was past. How ridiculous this prognostication has proven is seen in the fact that since the I.C.R.A. started making saliva tests of all winners at the beginning of the fall series of running races, no less than three owners have been suspended due to positive reaction to tests made on their horses.

The unfortunate and ridiculous circumstance of the testing is that the owner must bear the penalty — and it is a certainty that no owner is going to tamper with one of his animals knowing full well that if it wins he will be barred from all tracks. Undoubtedly, therefore, other persons not connected with the stables must be responsible, yet the onus falls on the owner.

Most recent suspension was that of George M. Hendrie, one of Canada's most widely-known and respected breeders and owners, whose Storm Lass Showed evidence of stimulant, following a winning race at Woodbine Park, Toronto. Mr. Hendrie is vice-President of the Ontario Jockey Club, and his family name has been connected with horse racing since well back into the last century and never has a finger of suspicion been pointed at the historic name. The unfortunate trackman has offered a reward of $1,000 for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the person or persons who tampered with the mare Storm Lass.

It seems about time that the authorities instituted some regulations or precautions to prevent such skulduggery. A suggestion has been made that a receiving barn be installed at all Ontario tracks where horses will be taken two hours before race time and guarded by licensed stablemen. Perhaps this will be the answer to the great need for protection, not only for the owners but for the general public as well.

A YEAR AGO IN SPORT — On October 6, 1937, New York Yankees blasted Carl Hubbell from the mound with a 7-run outburst in the sixth innings and went on to a 8-1 triumph in the first game of the world series against New York Giants. Vernon "Lefty" Gomez was the pitcher for the Yanks, who eventually took the series and world's professional baseball championship in five games.

ODDS 'N ENDS — While the bouquets are being handed out to Chas. Leo "Gabby" Hartnett for his feat leading the Chicago Cubs to a National League pennant he should keep a finger crossed in the future in case history repeats itself. Gabby took over the managerial reins from Charley Grimm on July 21 with the Cubs in third place 5 1-2 games back of the leading Pittsburgh Pirates. Grimm, a glance at the back files shows, replaced Rogers Hornsby as manager on August 3, 1932, with the club in second place, five games behind the leaders, who were the same Pirates. Grimm, like Hartnett, pushed the Cubs up into first place and won the plaudits of the fans and his employer. Today he is out of baseball. Maybe Gabby will get the mid-season gate himself some day.

ANSWERS DEPT. — Osgoode Hall, champions of the Ontario Union, defeated Montreal, Quebec title-holders, by a 45 to 5 score back in 1892 to become the first recognized Dominion senior rugby football champions.

BELLEVILLE MARKET

Price tones showed a slight upward tendency in the vegetable and egg markets with the latter rising two cents to 35c per dozen for "A" selects on Belleville Market on Saturday. Mediums were quoted at 32 cents, with pullets, and some ungraded stock selling at 32c and 33c per dozen.

Tree-picked fruit was offered at $1.50 per bushel with windfalls quoted at anywhere from 50c to $1 per hamper. Wolf River and St. Lawrence were quoted at from $1.00 per bushel while the first Tolman Sweets of the season moved fairly well at $1.00 per hamper.

Golden peaches nearing the end of production were offered at from 39c to 49c per basket with a profusion of blue and white grapes selling at 30c and 35c per basket.

Watermelon and canteloupe were obtainable in all sizes and at all prices. Wild grapes were offered at 25c per basket with plums and green-gages selling well at 35c and 70c per 6-quart basket.

Potatoes remained steady at all-week quotations of 50c per bushel with bag-lots going at 75c each. Radishes, beets, carrots and lettuce sold in bunch lots at 5c while some choice giant cabbage and cauliflower moved well at prices ranging from 8c upward.

Table and individual squash found favour in the eyes of shoppers with the former going at from 10c each with the latter variety offered at 5c.

Mushrooms were fairly plentiful, with berry-box lots selling at 10c each. Puffballs in varying sizes sold well at various prices. Hickory nuts made their market debut and a choice quality selling at 20c per quart.

Sweet corn, while not as abundant as last Saturday, moved well at 10c and 15c per dozen ears for both yellow and white varieties.

low and white varieties.

Mudcats at two pounds for 25c and pike at 10c per pound rounded out a slim fish offering.

NEWS OF INTEREST FOR BUSY FARMERS

Sugar Beet Crop

Present indications are that the sugar beet crop will yield well above average this year, and have a high sugar content. Preliminary tests showed an average sugar content of nearly 15 per cent. on September 1st, which is higher than at this date for several years. Root development was particularly good during August and estimates now place production in excess of 10 tons per acre. With the high temperatures and humidity which prevailed during the first week of August in Southwestern Ontario Leaf Spot began to appear on early planted fields. Fortunately, for the crop, the weather became cooler and less humid, so that Leaf Blight did not progress rapidly. In general the crop has been free from disease and the beets show healthy green tops.

The Vegetable Crop

In Western Ontario weather and moisture conditions during the past month have been generally favourable for good growth, with the exception of some frost damage to vine crops in the Bradford and South Simcoe districts. Heavy rains and humid weather earlier in the season in Essex, Kent and Lambton counties caused considerable damage to the onion crop, resulting in heavy loss by skin and heart rot which may materially affect the storing quality. The late potato crop is comparatively free from blight and quality very good. However, the tuber set is below normal and production will be below average. Tomatoes have improved considerably in quality.

In Eastern Ontario tomatoes have yielded an average crop but quality has been slightly below normal due chiefly to destruction of foliage by tomato worms, and too much wet weather causing cracks. Yellow ends have been very general also. Potatoes are expected to yield good, but late cauliflower are below average.

Plowing Match Next

Every farmer has an eye for a nice plow team and a good piece of plowing. He will have all this to his heart's content at the great International Plowing Match to be held at Minesing, near Barrie, October 11, 12, 13 and 14. Here he will see the champion plowmen of Canada with their sleek and steady plow teams. He will see the greatest collection of up-to-date farm machinery ever housed under canvas — almost a mile of "tent city." He will see demonstrations that will prove invaluable to him in his every-day life on the farm. These are just a few of the reasons why every Ontario farmer should make a special effort to attend the one and only International Plowing Match, the greatest event of its kind not only in the British Empire, but the entire world. Every farmer should bring his wife and family too. There will be educational and practical exhibits that every farm woman will appreciate.

A popular feature of former plowing matches will be maintained in the plowing by oxen, a link with the historic past of Ontario. At 11 a.m. and 2:30 p.m. each day, experienced drivers will demonstrate how plowing was done in earlier years, with oxen hitched by yokes.

Farm drainage talks and demonstrations by machinery and hand will be given each day at 10 a.m. and 2:15 p.m., by representatives of the Agricultural engineering, Department O.A.C., Guelph. Cultural implements of various sizes and modern design will be demonstrated every day by manufacturing companies on land near the parking area.

Plow setting will be discussed by experts who show how different types of plows should be prepared for work. There will be also demonstrations to show the power required to haul different implements at various depths by the Field Husbandry Division, C.E.F., Ottawa.

Another interesting feature each day will be an address by Dr. C. D. McGilvray, Principal of the Ontario Veterinary College, Guelph, on "Anatomy and Care of Horses' Legs and Feet."

Horseshoeing competitions will be a new and popular feature. Demonstrations will be held at 2 p.m. on Tuesday and Wednesday and young farmers may learn how to do "cold shoeing," welding and other simple iron working practices. Competitive competitions for blacksmiths will be held on Thursday and Friday. An eye-filling spectacle that will bring joy to every farmer's heart will be the multiple hitch, with three to five horses working in one team and driven by representatives of the O.A.C., Guelph.

Seed cleaning and soil testing demonstrations will draw large crowds as will the display of hydro-electric equipment of farm and home conveniences. Other educational exhibits and demonstrations will be put on by the Ontario Department of Health, Ontario Forestry Department, and Animal Pest Control by the Provincial Zoologist.

Plow Weedy Pastures This Fall
"There are many old unprofitable pastures to be seen in the countryside heavily infested with weeds — goldenrod, Canadian thistle, wild carrot, etc.," says Dr. O. McConkey, of the Ontario Agricultural College, and he continues — "These can be improved 200 to 300 per cent by (1) fall plowing, (2) cropping for one or two years to clean off weeds, (3) raising the soil fertility level, (4) seeding to a well balanced pasture mixed of legumes and grasses."

If you have a weedy pasture of this kind, plan to plow it this fall and start the improvement plan as outlined above, and it will return you many dollars of profit over the present low producing pasture.

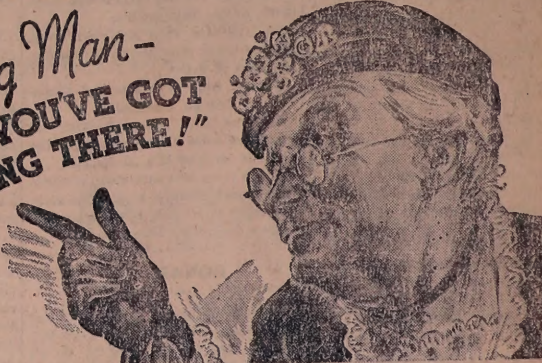

Old pastures infested with weeds like Canadian thistles, wild carrot, etc., are a weed menace to the community. Plowing and clean cropping and in some cases summer fallowing, are the best methods of getting rid of the weeds and preparing suitable soil conditions for seeding down to a profitable pasture mixture.

Mowing pastures should be more widely practised in Ontario. When the new pasture is established and weeds begin to show, mow early every season when the weeds are in the first stages of bloom. Most weeds are readily killed at this period of growth. The mower bar should be fitted with adjustable skids which raise the mower bar about 6 inches, depending on the roughness of the pasture. These skids can be easily made by the local blacksmith and are inexpensive.

When seeding down be sure that the fertility of the soil is high, especially in the materials such as lime, phosphorous and potash. The best plan is to send a composite sample of the soil, taken at ten different places across the field, to the Soils Department, Ontario Agricultural College, for analysis. The report and suggestions from that department will enable you to fertilize wisely and economically according to the fertility requirements of your soil type. Minerals increase the chances of securing a good catch of seeds, lower the percentage of winter killing of the legumes, and what is most important, increases the protein and material content of the feed.

For further information regarding mixtures for pastures and hay write to the Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, for Circular No. 28, "Pastures is Paramount for Milk and Meat Production in Ontario."

The costly and beautiful gifts show the highest esteem in which the bride and groom are held. Mr. George Thompson, Reeve of Rawdon, acted as chairman and after calling the gathering to order called on Miss Jerrine Thompson to read the following address: Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Heath — Dear Grace and Ralph:

Your friends and neighbours have gathered here this evening after your recent marriage, to extend to you our hearty good wishes for a truly happy voyage upon the sea of matrimony.

Both of you have always lived in our midst and have taken a ready and willing part in the social and other affairs of the church and community and we cannot pass this opportunity of expressing to you our appreciation of this valuable work. BEAUTY PROBLEMS

DISCUSSED BY

Problems for many Canadian Newspapers.

THE SECRET OF A LOVELY SKIN

It is frequently remarked how fresh smooth and radiant are the complexions of English women. The secret lies in the moisture that abounds over the British Isles, for a clear, sparkling skin requires moisture to retain its bloom.

Our weather plays havoc with our skins. Burning sunshine and biting cold wintry blasts dry the skin; they take away the natural elasticity of the face and, as a result, wrinkles and furrows appear so early.

There is only one method of preventing dryness of the skin and sagging of the tissues, and that is to lubricate the skin with a rich cream containing ingredients which penetrate into the tissues.

It is also essential that this cream possesses properties that will rejuvenate and revitalise the tissues, so as to combat wrinkles, flabbiness and general aging of the skin.

Fortunately Science has come to our aid. Recently famous scientists discovered that Vitamin F alone can, by external application to the skin, penetrate to the underlying tissues and effectively repulse with its inevitable lines and crows'-feet.

Vitamin F is the only ingredient which accomplishes this feat, and it is thus of vital importance to every woman. For it is easier to "prevent" than it is to "cure", and early care of the skin will repay lavish dividends of skin loveliness in years to come.

Don't Dally

So many women neglect their skin excepting for merely spasmodic attentions, until the suddenly waken up to the disagreeable realization that advancing time is marking its hallmark on their facial appearance! Then it is not nearly so easy to offset the ravages of time.

My advice to every woman over 20 is to massage a rich tissue cream, with a Vitamin F base, into the face and throat every night before retiring. Younger girls should carry out the same treatment, but several nights each week will suffice until they are out of their teens.

Massaging is important, too. It must be properly done to be effective, and here is the method: take a dab of cream on the finger-tips of both hands and pat it gently over the skin, without stretching the skin. Patting stimulates the circulation of the blood, which is a good thing for the face.

Harold, Ontario,
September 28, 1938

Miss Jean Donald.

Dear Jean,—

We the members of the Junior Bible Class of Salem Sunday School, take this opportunity of spending one more pleasant evening with you, in your home, before you leave our midst to take up your new duties in your chosen profession of nursing. We will miss you, Jean, in our class; also in our Young People's, Choir, and Church of which you were a part. However, we must all make our choice for our place in life, and as you have chosen the noble profession of nursing, we wish you every success, and want you to know that we will be watching and hoping for your progress. We would ask you to accept this gift, though small, it carries with it a multitude of sincere good wishes from your friends of Salem Sunday School and Church.

Signed on behalf of the Junior Bible Class — Mrs. Delbert Sine, Teacher, Edna McMaster, President.

Harold, Ontario,

Mr. and Mrs. Reynolds:

One's wedding day is one of the great days of life. We usually wish our friends sunshine on that day, for it is said "Happy is the bride the sun shines on." But they say after all we have to make our sun shine, and we all thought a nice little shower would help you to remember the happy occasion. That is why we are here.

There are quite a lot of real nice things that we could say about you, if we took the time, but we shall ask Jim to tell them all to you after you get home for he knows them all. We all wanted to give you something in remembrance of the occasion. It would have been more satisfactory for us if you could just have put your hand down in our pocket and taken out a piece of money and got something nice for yourself, but the other way seems to be the more usual one. So we have brought these gifts for you, taking the chance of half-a-dozen bringing the same thing. We just ask you, in taking them home, to take good care of Jim, for when the shower is over and the dishes broken and the linen worn out, and the sun shines on you again, you will need him to hold the parasol. So here they are, and "Good Luck".

Signed — Edith Tanner, Erma Sine, Lindsay Tanner, Lorne Hagerman, Kenneth Belcourt.

Both Jim and Verna thanked their friends for the lovely gifts, and invited all to visit them in their new home. Lunch was then served and a social time spent together.

E. HANNAH BURNED TO DEATH NEAR COBOURG

Believed to have become excited by the approach of a train at the railway crossing east of Cobourg, shortly before noon on Monday, after successfully crossing the tracks, the tractor trailer owned by the Canada Transport Co., of which W. R. McCreary is the proprietor, and driven by Ewart Hannah, 28, of 113 North Front Street, Belleville, went out of control and turned over in the south ditch, catching fire and burning to death the driver before he could be extricated from the wreckage. Harry McCreary, who was accompanying Hannah, escaped the raging inferno. The tractor trailer with a load of merchandise bound for Toronto, was completely destroyed.

The tractor and trailer had been loaded with merchandise at Belleville and was being driven westerly by Hannah, accompanied by young McCreary. According to statements given Mr. McCreary by the survivor, his son, Harry McCreary, Hannah successfully negotiated the first set of railway tracks east of Cobourg, but upon approaching a second railway crossing it is said Hannah glanced towards the east, where he saw a train approaching from that direction, but some considerable distance back. He is believed to have become excited, with the result that the tractor and trailer left the south side of the road and turned over into the ditch, where it caught on fire.

Young McCreary managed to extricate himself from the burning truck, but despite frantic efforts of himself and passing motorists, who stopped to assist, it was impossible to release Hannah, who was pinned beneath the wreckage in the cab of the vehicle. He burned to death. The truck and entire cargo of merchandise was a total loss. Wm. McCreary, proprietor of the Canada Transport Company later revealed. — Ontario Intelligencer.

Rapture Beyond

by KATHARINE NEWLIN BURT

FIRST INSTALMENT

When Jocelyn, forgetting what her music master had taught her, played music of her own, her mother, Marcella, was alarmed. It was like the voice of a stranger in the house.

She rose from the prie-dieu in an alcove of the long Spanish-looking room, difficult to recognize as the living room of a New York apartment, and came forward past intervening massive furniture to look at the player.

There she sat, the daughter Marcella had put into a foreign convent twelve years before, a smooth sleek golden girl, eighteen years old, full-bodied, narrow-waisted and round-hipped.

"I want her to be safe," she had murmured to a nun when twelve years before she had left the little girl trembling in the dim waxy-smelling parlor of the convent. And greeting her only two days ago on the wharf of her native city with all the strange tall towers stretching up behind them Marcella had said again to the same nun, twelve years older, more waxen and more frail, "Oh, dear Sister Delice, how shall I keep her — safe?"

The music Jocelyn was playing now, with that thunder look in her eyes and the bent position of her head, did not sound safe. Jocelyn played gropingly, changed the time, dropped into a definite melody and began to sing in French, softly. Marcella did not understand all the words but she made out that some child played in the house, ran down the street, worked in the garden with spade and hoe, but that always, suddenly, no matter what she did, something would cause her to look sharply back over her shoulder when . . . the little humpback crept up behind her . . . And this occurred in a refrain:

"Quand le petit bossu, ma foi!
Vient se placer derrieremol."
It was a French nursery rhyme,

Marcella remembered, but the music to which this child of hers had put it was not a nursery melody. It was a Poe theme, a melody of fear. Le Petit Bossu was no friendly genius who played with children. He was a little monster, a little master, and however the wretched haunted victim tried to distract herself, whatever childish pleasure or duty she undertook, there of a sudden, casting a cold shadow or making the faint sound of an uneven step, the little humpback, ma foi! had come to place himself behind her.

Jocelyn Harlowe's first ball-gown — it was for a costume ball — was white, as all first ball-gowns probably should be. She was dressed conventionally enough as Juliet, an ivory satin with a cap of pearls on her head and with a rope of pearls wrapped about her slim throat.

"I must marry this child quickly," Marcella thought. Her own image, tall and black, stood like a shadow in a mirror behind the radiant girl. "I am neither gifted nor disposed for its entertainment or control. I must get it off my hands, must lock it up again before it can injure me or divert me. I must make it safe again as it was safe in the convent. I must put it out of the way."

In her terror Marcella actually used this dreadful euphemism, without any realization of what her mind had said. She did not know that in her tormented and angry soul she had wished a death. She called herself Jocelyn's mother, but what she wished for in face of a brilliant being, deep-eyed, deep-bosomed, ruby-lipped, was . . . its annihilation. She called the destiny a marriage. She had even instantly, as a murderer instantly conceives his weapon, a husband in her mind. It must be managed quickly before Jocelyn was fully awakened to its reality. She must be made to long for it ignorantly as a release.

Before Jocelyn's return from France Marcella had been busy warming chilled social contacts, melting the edges from metallic connections of one sort or another. She had once had a great position in the city and it was not too difficult, in spite of what had once shattered her life, to make her self-remembered. So when she brought Jocelyn into the ballroom she was able to obtain for her, aided by her own exotic charm, a sufficiency of fantastic partners — to Jocelyn they all seemed Romeos and the ballroom was an iridescent bubble of delight — and at last even to attract for her the supper-partner Marcella had desired. This was Felix Kent, dressed as the Jack of Diamonds.

"But you don't look it," he said, seating himself beside flushed Juliet at the small palmy rosy table they had taken for themselves. "You don't look it and you don't act it and you don't — yes, you do speak it. You have a delicious little French accent. And, well, something about the way you move your lips and use your eyes is different, conventional. Perhaps I'm not going to be disappointed after all."

This was an address altogether different from any Jocelyn had yet received. An older man, evidently.

"Mr. Kent," she said, "you have really no right to any disappointment have you? Because you can't have had an interest in me ever before tonight."

"You're wrong. I've had an interest in you for — let me see — twelve years."

"But you are just seely!" scoffed Jocelyn at her sweetest. "And I have not any French accent at all."

"Twelve years ago I saw you in a bank in Paris. You were on your way to the convent where your wise, wise mother has kept you jailed for all these years. And I said to your mother, 'Give me a first option when she comes out, won't you, Marcella?'"

"But, Mr. Kent, you are not so old as that?"

"I am nineteen years older than you are, Miss Jocelyn. I was twenty-five when you stood in the Paris bank and looked up at me. You weren't a pretty little girl. But I had a sort of vision. And even then I liked the notion of a convent-bred. . . ." he dropped his voice and diverted his large blue eyes, "wife," he finished gravely. After a pause, "It's more than a notion now that I am close to you," even too close, it seemed to Jocelyn, "and looking into your eyes and hearing you speak I see that you are really convent-bred. How long will that last through, here?"

"And my mother did give you a first — option?" questioned Jocelyn with her eyes down.

"She did, really. She said to me that day in Paris, 'There isn't a man in the world I'd be so glad to trust her to, Felix. Will you wait?'"

"I am here," said Felix. "Thirty-seven years old. Successful. Unattached."

"And you did wait, of course!"

"I wonder," she spoke musingly, "what you were doing all these years? Think of it, if you will, twelve years! And you in the world, exciting, pleasant, dangerous, full of so many wonderful stirring things. And you were making your success. A great one, wasn't it?"

"I will admit to you that it has not been — insignificant."

"And learning to understand men and women and life. For twelve long years, while I . . . oh, Mr. Kent, how shall I ever make them up — twelve years."

"But, dear child, the years between six and eighteen are not years when a girl, or a boy either, can be turned loose in the world."

"Are they not?" she said. "Some times I've dared to think, though naturally nobody cares what I think, that a great education for the world would be to live in it."

"Life for a girl should begin with her marriage."

"That is what they taught us at the convent. I did not know you believed that here."

Kent laughed. But he was giddy and filled with instant fear. There had never in the world been a lovely child like this one, so frankly hungry, so ignorantly passionate, and so untaught; with not a jot of the deep cold wisdom of experience. He could hardly bear to surrender her to her next partner. He felt an absurd knife-edge of pain and anger when she was drawn into the young man's arms. The boy had a masked face and a slender gondolier's waist, sashed in scarlet

Ken sought out Jocelyn's mother and bending his fair lean height above her he talked and talked and talked.

Jocelyn danced past them where they stood and wondered why they were so flushed and serious.

"It was the Jack of Hearts, wasn't it, that stole the tarts?" she asked the gondolier.

"Sure thing," said this partner, trying to break the soft reserve of her body to his own will, "but that chap you had supper with is the Jack of Diamonds. He's Felix Kent. He's got 'em too."

"Not tarts, but diamonds?" asked Jocelyn in a voice that seemed to ask for love.

"Yes, or the means to get them. He's richer than old What's-His-Name. He could hang his queen all over with diamonds from her head to her toes. He could buy the world for her."

"Buy the world? But just what would that mean?"

The boy laughed, stopped and made an enormous gesture, all in the synopated rhythms of their exercise. Means whoopees, tout'ce qu'il y a, he said. "Let yourself go, kid. The music will teach you. I'm not dangerous. Not half so dangerous as a Knave of Diamonds, anyway."

"I think I will marry the Knave of Diamonds," said his obedient partner just before she was stolen from her young tutor in the art of letting herself go, "because I want nothing smaller than the whole wide world and I would love whoopees."

It was morning, almost broad morning, when Jocelyn stepped into her mother's waiting automobile. Marcella had climbed in first and settled into her corner profoundly. She leaned back there like a limp wooden doll.

Jocelyn put her hand on the side of the door and set her foot on the running board.

Something cold touched her hand. She stepped down again and turned. Just behind her, a man had placed himself. A cripple. He looked up into her face from his shrunken height with bright and eager eyes. In his left hand, the one that had not touched her, he held the vanity case she had let fall.

Jocelyn took it, almost snatched it from his long fingers, thanked him breathlessly and stumbled into the car. It moved forward.

"Why did you take so long to get in, Jocelyn?" There was something like repressed fury in Marcella's nervous voice. "The air blew in on me. I'm chilled through."

"A little man. A little man — came and placed himself beside me," she said painstakingly.

She gripped her mother's hard long hand in both of her own and bent down her head upon them. So she crouched against Marcella's lap with her face hidden. She had never really known a mother's comforting. So perhaps she did not know how to miss it either, then.

Often Felix Kent came in to see them. During his visits in the living room Marcella was a constant chaperon. Jocelyn would play her piano and sit with her eyes down listening to her mother's hard manufactured conversation with the older man.

But the girl's eyes studied Felix Kent. The grayness on each temple was handsomely correct. A sort of incandescence obliterated the expressionless of his large blue eyes when they met hers. Watching him side-long through her tilted eyelashes Jocelyn found him a feast to her starved fancy for hero-worship. She had never before studied a man at such close quarters.

There came an evening when Marcella left them alone.

Jocelyn was at her piano dutifully executing a commanded melody. It was intricate and held all her attention. She did not know that she had been left unchaperoned in the room with Felix Kent.

He came and stood close to her, leaning on the piano. In the slim severity of evening dress he looked sleek and attractive, like a panther.

"Stop playing . . . just a minute, Jocelyn, please."

She obeyed.

"Your mother has left us together."

Jocelyn stood up, saw that the rest of the room was empty, sat down, lowered her eyes and flushed.

"I asked her to," Felix continued. He came and sat down beside her on the long piano bench. "You're not afraid of me, are you?"

"No. But she was shaking and wondering why."

"Your freshness, my darling, is an ecstasy to me. And your wildness as lovely as a spring wind. You know I love you."

"Yes," said Jocelyn, trembling. "Do you think you can love me?"

"I don't know, monsieur."

He laughed in soft delight and drew closer.

"I may put my arm around you, loveliest?"

She made no movement nor sound.

DUKE OF WINDSOR'S FINE SHORT-HORN HERD SOLD

Auctioneers have disposed of the Duke of Windsor's fine herd of Short-horn cattle, realizing $10,000 on 70 head for the Royal owner of the "EP" Ranch nestled in the foothills of Alberta's southern rangeland.

Gilbert Elken and Harold H. Hofstrand, North Dakota ranchers, and E. J. Whitlaw of Toronto, made the largest purchases of the six-hour sale and some 500 cattlemen were in attendance. Elken, from Mayville, M.D., paid $985 for 12 head of purebred and Hofstrand whose home ranch is at Church's Ferry, N.D., $600 for four head. In partnership the North Dakota ranchers bought Bapton Orator, prize bull, for which they paid $410, the highest price of the day.

Second price of the day was paid by the Toronto stockman for Larbert Templar, which brought $400. Whitlaw also paid $350 for Princeton Omega, a prize herd cow and he purchased several other cows and calves.

25,000 NEW RURAL USERS OF HYDRO

During the four years of Liberal administration in Ontario, 25,000 new rural customers have been added to the rural power districts, Hon. William Houck, Vice-Chairman of the Ontario Hydro Commission announced recently.

Throughout the Province the position of Ontario had shown immense improvement as a result of the application of business-like policies, declared Mr. Houck. Reserves had been maintained and added to, he claimed, and the condition of the various Hydro municipalities was a most healthy one.

"Since the Liberal Government assumed office in 1934, three separate reductions in service charges have been made," said the Vice-Chairman. "These various reductions are estimated to bring a saving to rural customers of between $800,000 and $700,000 annually."

SHIRT TAILS GOING

The end of the shirt-tail may be in sight. A patent has been issued in Washington to the inventor to "a combination coat shirt — that leaves off the tail — a sort of abbreviated shirt and collar that button into the coat." And now it remains for conservative man to abandon the ways of his ancestors and adopt this ingenious piece of haberdashery. A decade or so ago shirt tails were attacked all along the line. A shirt was patented that buttoned to the trouser tops and left nothing to be tucked in.

An elongated garter was invented that fastened high on the shirt, extended down to the socks, and rendered the shirt-tail as useless as a verminiform appendix.

A third remedy for shirt-tails was a shirt that turned into underwear when it disappeared below the belt.

The surplus material in men's shirts has survived all these efforts to discard it as an unnecessary and inexplicable appendage. And it seems highly probable that it will continue to survive for some time yet, a boon to the cotton industry and something for inventors to play with. — Detroit Free Press.

BEHIND THE HEADLINES OTTAWA

(By Dean Wilson)

Does Canada intend to follow a policy of foregoing her present position in international affairs as an autonomous partner state in the British Commonwealth of Nations for the sake of possible greater economic returns and physical protection in the event of any foreign power attempting an attack on this country, both of which have been virtually promised by the United States within recent weeks as a means of indirect persuasion in bargaining for economic agreements? It is a momentous question and every experienced observer along Parliament Hill will not hesitate to state that the answer is bound to prove a turning point in the history of this young country.

It was explained in last week's column that the present relationships between the United States and Canada are more closely intertwined than at any other time in the history of the two countries but in face of this fact there is no doubt that the answer to this momentous question is in the negative. The Dominion of Canada is anxious to follow a twin policy in connection with her relationships with the United States and the British Commonwealth of Nations. Nevertheless the people of this country are loyal to the Crown and they are imbued with a passion to maintain their own separate identity as an independent sovereign state, with every sign indicating that all discussions of absorption by the United States being nothing more than vague gossip.

The United States is passing through one of the most serious economic depressions in the recent history of that country, and of the 120,000,000 people in that wealthiest of world powers, there is real hardship for every man and woman, with no less than eight million persons being unemployed and many industries showing history-making signs of distress. Consequently there is a desperate effort to improve the economic structure of the land and this is the real basis for the aggressive attitude of the United States Government on the international scene, particularly within the past few months when the President and the Secretary of State issued stern warnings to the dictators of the world that the United States would not tolerate any violations of the principles of international law and order. It is rumoured that Uncle Sam will be repaid for this moral assistance in the trade treaties which the United States will operate jointly and separately with the various members of the British Commonwealth of Nations. However, while there are cultural, social, diplomatic, geographical and other interests which bind the United States with Canada, there is no doubt in well-informed circles along Parliament Hill that this country will not reconcile itself to anything which destroys the close relationships now existing between this Dominion and the rest of the British Commonwealth of Nations, though it is understood in some circles that Canada is ready and willing to help in some material way to bring about a closer co-operation between Uncle Sam and John Bull for the mutual benefit of these two democracies, if any critical situation should warrant such co-operative action in any international affair.

The people of Canada are not only loyal to the Crown, but they do not fail to appreciate the advantages of belonging to the British Commonwealth, which assures the two dominating races that compose the population of absolute liberty and a full measure of equality, a democratic constitution, a sound social policy, a good and decent standard of living, financial and trade benefits, security, prestige, and economic and cultural progress. On the other side of the picture, the people of Canada are apathetic to certain national ideas which prevail in the United States. For example, every effort on the part of some Canadians to adopt American ideas of artificial economic reactions have been followed in this country by torrents of vilification. This is true of any other attempt at leadership along any but the most conventional lines and wherein caution is the predominant qualification, with no doubt existing that the people of Canada are against any kind of radicalism. Russia established the Third International, Italy created Fascism, Germany produced Nazism, England brought forth the National Government and the United States presented the New Deal regime, but no such political reaction appealed to the majority of the electorate of Canada. Furthermore it was openly predicted that the question of Canada's twin relationships with the Motherland and the United States in times of war would be an important issue in the coming by-elections on November 14 in South Waterloo, Brandon, London and Montreal, particularly in the Quebec constituency, but this is now discounted in well-founded reports along Parliament Hill. Other issues are dominating the scenes in these by-elections, and the Montreal seat involves no national issue since the Government's candidate, Peter Bercyitch, K.C., is certain to hold his seat on account of personal popularity in the division which he has represented for over 20 years in the provincial field and the resultant provincial by-election will not disclose the opinion of the electorate on this issue since Louis Fitch, K.C., is a sure winner for the same personal reasons.

In other words, every experienced observer along Parliament Hill does not encounter any great difficulty to discount the many rumours circulating throughout Canada on the subject of this country's relations with the United States and the United Kingdom, but another extremely important question must be answered in order to facilitate any accurate and honest interpretation of Canada's action in any critical international situation. What is Canada's role in the history-making drama that is being played right now in Washington and London, particularly in the present tense state of affairs on the international scene? This vital question will be answered in this column next week.

HIGHWAY ENGINEERS STRIVE FIRST FOR TRAFFIC SAFETY

Ontario has had 38 per cent fewer highway traffic fatalities so far this year because of its extensive accident prevention program, it is stated in a survey just released by R. M. Smith, deputy minister of highways.

Mr. Smith said his department conducts its safety work on what is called the "three E" plan — Engineering, Education and enforcement. In discussing the engineering aspect of this plan, he maintained that in every mile of highway being built in Ontario today, the safety of motor and pedestrian traffic is invariably the first and prime consideration.

He spoke of how department engineers, when preparing blueprints for new roads, were chiefly concerned with eliminating dangerous curves and cutting the top off dangerous hills. Formerly, many curves were built to carry traffic safely at 30 miles an hour and many hills permitted drivers to see each other in oncoming traffic at a distance of only 200 feet. Today, curves are built so that motorists may travel up to 60 miles an hour, and by cutting hills and filling valleys the visibility on grades has been increased in most cases to 1,500 feet.

"The many dual highways under construction," Mr. Smith said, "are constructed essentially for safe driving, but at the same time they have allowed a ten-fold increase in traffic volume since on the new, spacious roads the pace of traffic is not established by the slowest driver on the highway."

Mr. Smith referred to the improvement in highway traffic safety records resulting from the construction of "cloverleafs" which eliminate the necessity of cars cutting across the flow of traffic on main highways when making a left turn.

Much work is done each year, he stated, in eliminating railway and highway level crossings by the building of grade separations in the form of subways and "passovers". At less dangerous railroad intersections, "wig-wags" have been installed and the right-of-way has been cleared in cases where the view was obstructed.

He spoke of the work that is being done in highway illumination, in installation of traffic-operated signal lights, guide rails, the widening of road shoulders and elimination of dangerous side ditches. More than 100,000 signs of every type have been erected throughout the province, he said, and each of these signs is designed to make highway travel safer.

"The psychological factor," Mr. Smith pointed out, "has been taken into consideration in the construction of new highway bridges. They are being made wider than the highway to eliminate the 'bottle-neck' feeling many drivers have when they come to a bridge. Superstructure is being eliminated on bridges in order to make them seem less hazardous in the minds of drivers."

BE ARTISTIC WHEN YOU ARRANGE FLOWERS

If you have a flair for flower arrangement, try to achieve the unusual. Have an assortment of flower holders for shallow bowls handy. Select carefully vases and bowls which will harmonize with the room you wish to decorate as well as the blossoms you use. A few blooms with buds and leaves gracefully arranged, will give a more restful effect than an over-crowded vase of miscellaneous flowers. If your bouquet appears top-heavy cut the stems shorter or use a taller vase.

PLENTY OF SNOW, 40 BELOW CLERIC PREDICTS

Rev. A. J. Bruce, Copper Cliff, Ont., cleric whose fame as a weather prophet is widespread, predicted "a real old-fashioned" winter, with plenty of snow and many "40-below" days.

"Get out the winter garments early," he advised Nickel Belters, "and keep them on until after March 21, 1939. Snowfall will be greater than in past winters and there will be sudden changes of short duration."

OFFERS MANION SEAT, SETS NOV. 14 FOR VOTE

Nov. 14 has been set for by-elections in four federal ridings, Prime Minister Mackenzie King announced on Tuesday.

At the same time he revealed the Liberal Party was willing to allow Hon. Dr. R. J. Manion an acclamation in the vacant seat in London. The party, said Mr. King, had already communicated with the Conservative Association of London with a view to smoothing the way for a new Conservative Leader's entry to the House of Commons.

Nov. 14, said the Prime Minister, was the earliest possible date the by-elections could be had. The new electoral legislation passed at the last session of the House provided for the preparing of new lists, which would take some time, he said.

Nomination day, in each case except Brandon, will be one week before polling day. In Brandon the nomination day will be two weeks before polling day.

Mr. King said he would welcome Dr. Manion to the House and he had every reason to believe an acclamation would be possible.

The vacancies were all created by death, F. C. Betts, Conservative, in London; A. M. Edwards, Conservative, in Waterloo South; David Beaulieu, Conservative, in Brandon, and S. W. Jacobs, Liberal, in Montreal-Cartier.

PEANUTS THRIVE IN PICTON GARDEN

Peanuts sown in his garden on Lake Street, Pictou, by Fred Smith, have developed into vigorous plants, each with a large cluster of peanuts on the roots. One plant left at the Gazette office had 30 small peanuts. The plant itself is about 18 inches high.

Mr. Smith stated that nuts from the shell were planted. Several flowers came up along with leaves and as the blossoms died the end containing the seeds bends and finally enters the ground to ripen. A plant grows from each of the nuts found in one shell, and as the plant grows, more blossoms come with the same process taking place. — Pictou Gazette.

WHO AND WHAT MAKE THE CRISIS

Toronto Telegram has compiled the following guide to the persons, forces and places taking the central part in the present dispute in Central Europe.

Adolf Hitler, Chancellor of Germany, with the title of Fuehrer (phew-rer), meaning leader, and head of his party, the Nazis.

Field Marshal Goering (guring) is Hitler's chief assistant with a reputation as an organizer and a string of medals earned as an aviator in the Great War.

The Nazis (naw-zees) are a political organization of Germans, in which absolute authority is wielded from the top down, with the object of carrying out a National Socialist program of rebuilding Germany on a common-people's base into one great nation embracing all peoples of German blood and language.

The Sudetens (soo-det-ens) are a group of Germans living inside the borders of Czechoslovakia, just to the east of Germany, near the Sudeten Mountains, which are so named because they lie in the south-eastern part of greater Germany.

Czechoslovakia is a state with a democratic constitution created after the Great War to include various small groups of peoples previously parts of Germany, Austria, Hungary, Poland and Rumania.

Prague, the capital of Czechoslovakia, is called Praha by the Czechs. It was German in ancient times.

PROPER DIET IMPORTANT TO HEALTH

In raising the general standard of health, diet was far more important than housing, Sir Edward Mellanby, eminent British nutritionist, told an Ottawa gathering recently.

"Far be it from me to discourage good housing measures, but diet is of first importance from a health standpoint," said Sir Edward, Secretary-General of the Medical Research Council of Great Britain and Chairman of the League of Nations Committee on Nutrition, who is addressing Ontario audiences under the auspices of the Canadian Medical Association.

In support of his contention that proper food was more important than good housing, Sir Edward stated that the infant mortality in the Island of Lewis in the Hebrides, where the homes were on the lowest possible scale, was only 40 per thousand. At the same time, the death rate among infants in the rest of England was 130 per thousand.

"It would be hard to find worse housing conditions than on this island. There were no windows or chimneys. Smoke escaped through the only door. Cows, pigs and chickens all lived in the same room with the family. But the babies were breast-fed and the children and adults all ate natural foods, from the cow, the hen, and fish from the sea," he said. "When an investigation was made in 1906, there was no tooth decay among the children and all had straight legs. When our investigator went back last year he found things had gone badly indeed. When people lived near to a shop where our so-called 'civilized', high energy-bearing foods were easy to obtain, their general nutrition was poorer. When they lived far away, and had to depend on natural foods, their health was greatly improved."

Developing the same theme, Sir Edward asserted that on the Island of Tristan da Cunha, in the South Seas, there was no tooth decay and no woman had ever died in childbirth. "They live on potatoes, not on white wheat flour," he commented.

Proper feeding would add to the physique and strength, mental and physical, of the average citizen, Sir Edward was confident.

"There is a great amount of stunted growth in all countries — stunted both physically and mentally. The poorer the person, the more likely he is to be stunted," observed the British scientist. Of 58,000 would-be recruits for the British army examined between 1930 and 1933, 40 per cent (23,000) were rejected due to bad teeth, deafness, flat feet, and heart disease. This was indicative of the low health level of Britain's poorer classes, he said, as all these ailments were much commoner among the poor.

By the time English children were old enough to go to school, they were often "damaged goods," he observed. Of 1200 children attending London county council schools, 70 per cent were found to have badly decayed teeth. Others had bad tonsils, anaemia and tuberculous glands.

"This is damage that can never be remedied. You can tinker about with them later, but you can never quite get them back to normal," he warned.

The wealthy also had their own diseases, said Sir Edward. "If it is any comfort to the poor, the well-to-do have a higher death rate from diabetes and appendicitis," he added. "It balances out."

Of all protective foods, milk was by far the most important, declared Sir Edward. Races whose diet was rich in milk had greater stature, strength, physique and mental development. Among African tribes, consumption of milk meant the difference between a stalwart race of warriors, such as the Dinkas and the Masai, and "stunted, lackadaisical runts."

Tests in an English private school showed that addition of one pint of milk daily to the basic diet increased the strength and weight of the pupils. Their height increased in one year by one inch more than those not obtaining the milk, while the gain in weight was almost double. The pupils played strenuously as ever but they had fewer fractured bones. Incidence of rheumatism also decreased, the survey showed.

The first vitamin to be discovered, Vitamin B-1, came to light when prisoners and hens on the Island of Java, both of which were fed on polished rice, developed the same disease, disclosed Sir Edward. Since the Great War, all the other discoveries regarding the health-protective features of natural foods had been made. It was not learned that rickets was due to lack of the sunshine vitamin, Vitamin D, until after.

Sir Edward Mellanby summed up the findings of nutritionists in the last 20 years with the message that all the foods required for complete health could be obtained by building the diet around dairy products such as milk, cheese and butter, fresh and cooked vegetables, fresh fruit, eggs, fish, liver and kidneys, and meat.

SURPRISE SHOWER GIVEN BRIDE-TO-BE

The home of Mrs. F. Jackman, Front Street, was the scene of a pleasant event on Thursday evening last when a large number of friends and neighbours tendered a surprise party and shower to her daughter, Miss Pauline Jackman, on the eve of her marriage to Mr. Geo. Tulloch. A programme of community singing and musical numbers was presented, with Mr. A. Duncan acting as chairman, after which the coming bride and groom were given seats of honour and the following address was read by Mrs. C. A. Wells. The young couple were the recipients of many beautiful and useful gifts, indicative of their popularity in the community. Brief addresses of thanks and appreciation were delivered by the young couple. Following is the address:

Dear Pauline and George:

We, your friends and neighbours have gathered this evening to express to you in a tangible way the esteem in which you are held in our community. Having recently learned of your plans for marriage we wish to extend to you all the joy and success that goes with the making of a home. Added responsibilities necessarily will be placed upon your shoulders, but this will be offset by the new-found pleasure in building up and maintaining a home of your own.

To you Pauline our sincerest wish is that the years to come will prove you to be a loving wife and mate and a pleasant homemaker.

And to you George, may you ever be a faithful and devoted husband and may success and happiness crown every venture which you undertake. May you find the road of time a pleasant place to travel.

May love and cheer go on with you Each worry to unravel.

On behalf of the friends and neighbours we ask you to accept these gifts as a token of our sincerity in our wish for your wedded happiness. Signed on behalf of the community — Jean Potter and Frances Clarke.

Also to this address was later added the names of some thirty guests before it was presented to the future bride.

Dainty luncheon was served and the evening brought to a close climaxing a very happy event for all present.

ACKNOWLEDGMENT

Mrs. E. Todd, Treasurer of Wellman's Cemetery Committee, gratefully acknowledges a donation of $1.50 from Mrs. E. Scarlett, Campbellford.

RAWDON MAN FOUND STARVED TO DEATH

Starvation ended the life of Albert Jones, 67, of Rawdon Township, a hermit for the last four years, Coroner Eagleson decided. The body of the recluse was found early Wednesday evening, by George Wellman, a farmer of the neighborhood. Only two potatoes and a part of a bottle of pickles were in the cabin. It was thought he died some time Tuesday. Jones lived in a log cabin about three miles southwest of Marmora. Mr. Wellman went to get him to work for him. When there was no answer to his knocking, he forced the door and found the body.

He is survived by two brothers, one, Robert, lives in Marmora, and the other living in the United States.

NEWLY-WEDS HONOURED

On Friday evening, September 30th, a large number of friends and neighbours gathered at the home of Mrs. J. Sager, in honour of her son, Jack, and his recent bride, Doris.

At about nine o'clock the gathering was called to order by Mr. Harry Morrow, and the following program was enjoyed.

Community singing led by Mrs. H. Morrow. Musical selection by River Valley band. Recitation by Marjorie Bush; reading Mrs. W. H. Hanna; mock wedding by Ethel Richardson, bride, Don McIntosh, groom, Eleanor Bush, bridesmaid, Ralph Utman, groomsmen, Mr. A. Davis, parson, Jean McIntosh, soloist, Marjorie Bush, pianist, Jack Bush, bride's father; reading, Mrs. Ross Bush; reading, Mrs. C. Chard; community singing; reading, Mrs. D. Donehue; short addresses by Mr. Alex Park and Mr. C. Lansing. The following address was read by Mrs. Roy Bush:

Stirling, Ontario,
September 30th, 1938
Mr. and Mrs. Jack Sager,
Dear Doris and Jack—

We hope that we will leave with you tonight so many good wishes for the future that September 30th will be a red-letter day for you.

It is quite fitting and appropriate that we rejoice with you tonight in the work you have just begun, namely the setting up of a new home.

Good homes are what make Canada a land to be proud of. At a gathering similar to this we heard a chairman say that his idea of patriotism was for a community to gather and offer their good wishes, and pledge their loyalty to the new home-makers.

We trust Jack, that the cleverness and ability you showed through your school days, together with your wit and sense of humor, will tide you over many a trying time. We are sure you have the ability, along with the help of the wife you have chosen, to continue the high ideal and hospitality of the Sager home; the kind of home we have found on this corner for more than a generation. This house by the side of the road has long been a friend to man.

We also give a hearty welcome to the bride tonight. We hope soon, Doris, to know you better, and we anticipate meeting you in all our community activities and Institute work.

We women will pass on to you the blessing as expressed in the following poem:

"A Message from Old Married Folk"
Blessings on thee, little bride,
Long may last your honeymoon,

To our racks we welcome you
And the tasks we have to do—
Baking, stitching, planning meals,
Mending stockings, toes and heels;

Cleaning house each fall and spring,
Building shelves and gardening.
All these chores for man and wife
Make the sum of married life.

Autumn bride and happy groom,
Welcome to our joy and gloom.
Love has led you to our doors,
Where we dust and sweep the floors.

Paint the kitchen, wash the panes,
Purge with lye the stopped-up drains.
Scour each kettle, pot and pan,
Work and dream and hope and plan.

All these burdens rest for life
On the happy man and wife.
In the years that lie before
These are what your parents bore.

All these tasks which I review
Smilingly they did for you.
When the honeymoon is gone
You will meet them every one.

But, if only love remains,
You will laugh at all your pains,
And you'll grin at all your jokes
When you're just "Old Married Folks"

We ask you to accept these chairs and magazine rack as an indication of our good will.

Signed on behalf of the Women's Institute and your River Valley and Oak Hill neighbours.

Mr. Howard Morrow then read the following address:

Dear Doris and Jack—

Reinforced with greater numbers we have come in the same spirit but in a less boisterous manner than we did a few nights ago. As you have never been a boy to waste words, Jack, we are not going to weary you with a long preamble.

We are delighted that you have found so lovely a bride as you have brought among us, proving that you have succumbed to the charms of the elusive female. You have tried to hide your romantic nature beneath a mask of humour, so those of us who have been victims of your often too-clever jokes, rejoice that you find yourself on common ground with us.

Jack is a jolly sport ready to enter any adventure promising sufficient fun and we are glad to welcome you, Doris, as a comrade to help us along. May you always enjoy the use of this gift and remain members of the River Valley Charivari Gang.

Signed — Ernest Carr, John Kane and Harry Morrow.

They were then presented with a lovely floor lamp.

Doris and Jack both thanked those present for the gifts and invited them to come and visit them.

"For they are Jolly Good Fellows" was sung, after which lunch was served and a social hour spent.

LATE GEORGE T. FROST

One of the largest funerals ever witnessed in the village of Frankford took place on Sunday afternoon when a prominent member of the community, the late George T. Frost, was laid to rest. Friends and relatives from the entire district were present, and the church was unable to accommodate the large crowd present for the services. The wealth of floral offerings testified to the esteem in which the deceased was held.

Following the service in the home, the cortege proceeded to Trinity Church, where services were conducted by the rector, Rev. A. S. McConnell. The impressive last rites of the Orange Order were taken by officers of Frankford L.O.L. No. 240. Interment was made in Frankford cemetery, the pall-bearers being four sons, and two sons-in-law of the late Mr. Frost. Messrs Cecil Frost, Harold Frost, Carmichael, Bert Frost, Albert McConnell and Claude Tucker, of Stirling.

WHY FAVOUR TORONTO

Toronto, so we see, is to get higher relief grants from the Provincial Government. And why an exception in favour of Toronto? Any revision for the benefit of the municipalities should apply generally.

BRITISH RELIGIOUS FILMS TO BE SHOWN HERE

"Barabbas", a story written by the Rev. S. N. Sedgwick, of a rebel redeemed by love, illustrating the imprisonment of Barabbas and the Jewish mob's demand for his release so that Jesus might be crucified, rises with unflinching intensity to a profoundly moving climax.

Skilfully selected Passion music blends with restrained acting, natural yet striking dialogue and superb photography, to leave upon the mind a deep conviction that the Message of the Cross is the one hope for sinful men.

From the lovely pastoral scene with which the picture opens to the final drama at the foot of the Cross there is no shoddy effect, no hint of insincerity, no destructive falsity of emotion. The figure of Jesus never appears; a voice replies with strength and dignity to Pilate's questions. Criticism of that rendering is inevitable. No human voice can represent satisfactorily the voice of Jesus. Yet the scene is impressive. There is no incongruity. The imagination is subtly stirred, and the episode which follows, when the excited priests demand the crucifixion of our Lord and Pilate ceremoniously washes his hands of all responsibility, takes the spectator back to the Praetorium and enables him to see and understand exactly what happened in greater detail than from any printed record.

Barabbas with two of his companions — Dymas and Gestas — are seen in the prison cell, and among the finest psychological studies in the picture is the visit of the mother of Barabbas. While she bathes the wound in her son's forehead she speaks wistfully of the Healer, Who, if He had not been arrested, might, she thinks, have set Barabbas free. She tells how she saw Him dragged through the streets by the soldiers and how she followed, pushing her way through the crowd in the Judgment Hall, until she was so near to Him that she could touch the hem of His garment.

The above will be shown in St. Paul's United Church, Stirling, on Tuesday, October 11th.

With her many friends, the News-Argus joins in wishing her many happy returns of the day.

Charles H. Blakely

Charles H. Blakely, 68-year-old Rawdon farmer, was found dead sitting in a chair in his home on Friday evening last. The discovery was made by Mr. and Mrs. A. ADDRESS GIVEN AT ST. JOHN'S

LECTURE ON "DENMARK"
BY MISS M. BATEMAN IN PARISH HALL

"Denmark" was the subject of a very interesting address by Miss M. Bateman, in St. John's Parish Hall on Monday evening, Oct. 1st. Miss Bateman was assisted by Miss M. Donald Smellie, with whom she had journeyed on a trip to Europe. The audience was given an excellent account of the school system of Denmark and many of the features of that successful country were discussed by Miss Bateman, who with an excellent grasp on her subject and a keen sense of humour, proved to be a most entertaining lecturer. As the country is to a great extent rural, the first-hand information given was of considerable interest to the farmers who were present. The moving pictures shown by Miss Smellie, some of them in natural colours, added greatly to the success of the evening and Miss Smellie's account of a day at one of their special physical culture schools was a special feature.

The singing of Miss Vera Wilkinson, soloist of Trinity United Church, Toronto, was greatly appreciated by all who were present, and her rendering of the following two groups of songs was exceptionally well done: "O Wings of Song", "Oh, No, John", "Drink to me Only", "My Lover is a Fisherman" and "Homing". The evening was brought to a conclusion with the playing of the National Anthem by Miss Margaret Wilkinson, who proved to be an excellent accompanist to the soloist of the evening. Rev. A. S. McConnell acted as chairman.

WEAVER — MEYERS

Standards of gladioli, palm and fern in King Street United Church in Trenton formed a pretty background Saturday afternoon, October 1st, for a wedding of interest when Miss Virginia Ethel Meyers, granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Murdock, Trenton, became the bride of Mr. Ralph Watson Weaver, Ottawa, son of Mrs. L. S. Weaver and the late Mr. Weaver, of Trenton. The ceremony was performed by Rev. S. C. Moore, of Toronto, assisted by the minister, Rev. J. U. Robins.

Given in marriage by her father, Mr. Fred Meyers, of Brighton, the bride was lovely in a gown of imported starched lace, over taffeta in Pagan white. Fashioned on high empire lines, the bodice front was daintily tucked at the high neckline and at the raised waistline, forming soft fullness. The fitted bodice back was centred with a long line of tiny chiffon-covered buttons and corded loops. The long Florentine sleeves with shoulder fullness were tight fitting and tapered off to a point over the hand. The long skirt in panel formation, touched the floor in front, the

Two Trucks Collide

A collision between a Maple Leaf truck owned and driven by W. R. McMechan, of Stirling, and an International truck owned by the Houston Lumber Co., of Belleville, occurred at the corner of Front St. and the Frankford Road on Tuesday afternoon about 4.30. The McMechan truck, carrying a tractor and pulling a trailer on which there was a plow, approached the corner from the south, while the Houston truck was proceeding east on Front St., at the time of Mr. Douglas Kinn, alleged that the were Mr. Clare Norton truck failed to try Lafferty, sign on Front St.

CAMPBELLFORD RINK WINS

NAMENT CLOSES LOCAL
BOWLING SEASON

The 1938 Lawn Bowling season was terminated by the Stirling Lawn Bowling Club with an invitation doubles tournament on the local greens on Thanksgiving Day. Four rinks from the Campbellford Bowling Club, along with six local rinks made up the draw, with three fourteen-end games being played.

The prizes, consisting of men's fine shirts, were all won by the Campbellford bowlers, with Jack Linton and Archie Meyers, skip, taking first for three wins; G. Thompson and P. Locke, skip, for two wins, and N. Brown and J. Archer, skip, for one win. Ideal weather conditions prevailed, the greens were in excellent shape and the bowlers all agreed that it was the most enjoyable event held on the local greens this season.

At the conclusion of play the bowlers repaired to the Stirling Hotel to partake of a delectable Thanksgiving Dinner, prepared by "Mine Host", P. W. Long. Community singing, led by "Bob" Patterson, was enjoyed, and the presentation of prizes made by President Patterson, T. W. Solmes and Dr. E. A. Carleton, president of the Provincial Lawn Bowling Association. A resolution of sympathy to Mr. D. B. Cutcliffe, of Norwood, in his serious illness, was sponsored by W. J. Whitty and will be conveyed to him by Dr. E. A. Carleton. A Meyers expressed the appreciation of the visiting bowlers for the hospitality and friendship displayed by the Stirling Club to bring to a close one of the finest events ever staged by the Stirling Club.

The results of the draw during the afternoon were as follows:

First Game
R. Patterson and W. J. Whitty defeated C. Calver and W. Wiggins, 15-10; G. Thompson and P. Locke defeated J. E. O'Donnell and Dr. E. A. Carleton, 15-10; J. S. Morton and T. Solmes defeated N. Brown and J. Archer, 15-7; P. W. Long and H. R. Tompkins defeated C. F. Linn and C. R. Bastedo, 11-3; J. Linton and A. Meyers defeated L. Fair and F. R. Mallory, 16-10.

Second Game
Wiggins defeated Tompkins, 14-9; Whitty defeated Solmes, 8-3; Meyers defeated Locke, 16-12; Bastedo defeated Carleton, 16-6; Archer defeated Mallory, 16-4.

Third Game
Wiggins defeated Archer, 16-12; Meyers defeated Whitty 14-13; Locke defeated Bastedo, 12-9; Carleton defeated Mallory, 12-9; Tompkins defeated Solmes, 16-6.

SLOWER SPEED RATE

According to a press despatch from Toronto, Hon. T. B. McQueen, Ontario Minister of Highways, stated recently that he was ready to introduce legislation reducing the speed limit from 30 to 20 miles-an-hour in municipalities where the larger centres ask for it and the "public comes to its senses." He had always contended that the 30-miles-an-hour limit was excessive, added the minister. We agree with Mr. McQueen, in regards to the excessiveness of the speed, but we fail to see why there should be any delay in introducing legislation to reduce the speed limit in urban centres. The long list of deaths and injuries caused from motor accidents in these centres is enough to warrant the change. There should be no further delay.

TO CHOOSE A LEADER

Now that the date of the Conservative Convention to select a leader for the province has been set for December 9th, the battle between the various aspirants for the position will be on in earnest. Although the names of Col. George Drew and Leopold Macaulay are the more prominently mentioned, Cecil Frost, of Lindsay, is being suggested as a third candidate. There is also a rumour going the rounds that Hon. G. H. Ferguson will return to the political wars and contest the leadership. This we are inclined to doubt.

Col. Drew has outstanding ability as a gentleman and a scholar and is regarded as one of the most forceful speakers and writers in Ontario. Leopold Macaulay, who did such a splendid job as house leader during the last session, has displayed plenty of ability and can be reckoned with as a strong contender for the position. It has been predicted that the mantle of leadership will rest upon the shoulders of one of these two, but there is always the chance of a third candidate leaving the favourites in the background. Looking at it without any preference or prejudice it would not appear that any error will be made if either of these gentlemen is selected to head the party in this province.

AN ORGANIZATION IS NEEDED

Several times during the past week the News-Argus has received inquiries as to what nights the stores in the Village remain open for business, and in all cases the answer has been that "we did not know." Any inquiry on our part to individual merchants has been greeted with the same reply. Under the existing by-law the business men of the village close their places of business each Wednesday at noon and every night except Tuesday and Saturday at 6 p.m. from May 1st until October 1st. Since the latter date the stores have remained open on Wednesday afternoons, but there has been much uncertainty among the purchasers from the surrounding district over what nights the stores are open. This is a very unsatisfactory state of affairs and the quicker the merchants make some definite announcement the sooner it will be the better for all concerned.

On a number of occasions in the past we have urged the business men of the village to form their own association in order that problems such as this and many others might be settled, but so far they have not taken any action. Now that the holiday season is over, and business men are preparing for the winter months, an attempt should be made to form a merchants' organization in the village. Practically every town or village has its Board of Trade or Chamber of Commerce, and Stirling can ill afford to be without one.

PREVENT FIRES

This is Fire Prevention Week and citizens are asked to make an inspection of their homes and places of business to eliminate all causes of fire. Careless housekeeping in permitting the accumulation of inflammable litter and rubbish has been responsible for a great many fires in the past year. The careless practice of dumping litter of all kinds in basements or unused rooms, or around buildings is not only a serious fire hazard, but it is unsanitary and unsightly.

The losses caused by fire cannot always be compiled in dollars and cents, as many human beings meet death as a direct result of fire. In the past year 245 men, women and children were among the victims of the Fire Demon. However gloomy a picture this brings to one's mind, it is brightened somewhat in the fact that this was a reduction of over a hundred over the previous year. Fire Prevention Week is set apart for national observance in order that once yearly the attention of the general public may be directed to the tremendous loss of life and property by fire. Stirling has been fortunate in that the losses by fire during the past few years have been light, but its citizens should be ever on the alert to prevent fires. In our busy life we are too prone to put off the things we actually do not have to do. The causes of fire are comparatively simple. That is, the majority of them are. The chimney, stoves, furnace and smoke pipes or heating equipment rank first. Then comes electricity or other means of lighting, followed by poor housekeeping, rubbish, smoking, matches, and various careless personal habits. These common hazards cause more than half of the fire loss, and they are strictly preventable. Anyone of average intelligence can avert the danger from fire in their home, but how few there are who make the effort, and what terrible consequences follow their neglect.

CURRENT COMMENT

A spy story concerning a former resident of Stirling, has been going the rounds in this district for the past week. The party in question is alleged to have had complete plans of the airport at Trenton in his possession, and when apprehended, attempted to suicide by taking poison which he had on his person. In spite of the fact that our informant seemed satisfied as to the authenticity of the story, we are inclined to the belief that there is no truth in the rumour.

The lengthy controversy which raged last fall over the blue and orange auto markers for 1938, is not to be repeated this year. The 1939 markers will be black and white and there should be no trouble in distinguishing them. An experiment will be tried with the licenses for doctors, with thousands of tiny glass crystals being placed in the paint to provide a reflecting surface, which will be effective after dark. If this proves successful it is predicted that the 1940 markers will all be given a similar treatment. Since the 1938 markers are valid until March of next year, there will not be many of the new plates in circulation before next year.

There is a sharp contrast in the Butter and Cheese market today and what it was a year ago. About a year ago there was a shortage of butter in Canada and producers were withdrawing their milk from the cheese factories and sending it to be made into butter. This year there are millions of pounds of surplus butter in storage, which has dropped in price to a low level for this season of the year and there seems to be little chance of a change for the better because the English market is surfeited. Cheese on the other hand is enjoying a good market with Saturday's price on the Belleville Board being fourteen and a fraction cents per pound. With the forced drop in the price of butter fat it is likely that many farmers will switch their milk to the cheese factory for the balance of the season.

Idea is just a shrewd conception.

SOMETHING TO THINK OVER

(Trenton Courier-Advocate)
"The man who throws mud, loses ground?" was the sign at a Front Street service station the other morning. And incidentally if a man wasn't losing ground in this battle for business he would be too busy to throw mud.

BOUGHT WHEELS IN GERMANY

(Almonte Gazette)
Ontario people will be astounded when the facts come out about purchase of the water wheels for the hydro plant at Bala. They were made in Germany and delivery caused months of delay. It is claimed they are two per cent. more efficient than wheels made in Canada, which is open to doubt. There are at least three Canadian plants capable of making these wheels. As hydro water wheels in the past were made in Canada and proved satisfactory, this latest purchase by the Ontario Government will need some explaining.

TRANSIENT TRADERS ARE NOT WANTED

(Tweed News)

That the Village Council propose to take some steps to curb the transient traders and peddlers from invading this community is commendable. These fellows are a nuisance and they should not be permitted to continue their activities. The local merchant is in competition with mail-order houses which is stiff enough without having to contend with truckers who establish themselves on the main street, and without paying any taxes or taking care of any overhead to speak of, solicit trade. The amendment should apply not only to those selling fruit, but to any person who is disposing of goods which are sold in local stores. The tax should be made sufficiently high to keep them out. Local business men are paying wages, taxes, Hydro rates, and are contributing something to this village and should be offered some protection. The matter was brought to the attention of the Councils close November 7th. The City List closes November 21st, and Election Day is November 26th. Returning Officer for this constituency is Mr. Fred Elgie, who will glad to supply further information, to Roy Juby, local M.P. for the C. er Boys' Parliament.

ST. PAUL'S MISSION BAN

The meeting of St. Paul's United Church Mission Band was held in Sunday School rooms on Wednesday, Oct. 12. The meeting was opened singing a hymn, followed by the Lord's Prayer in unison. The Secretary's report was read by Evelyn West. Collection amounted to $1. Mrs. Gerald led in prayer, which was followed by the roll call. Mrs. Woodbeck took over the business and was agreed that an open meeting at the high school on Nov. 9th, with the Misses paid for cars in Canada, the Band putting on a good program. High price already paid for gas, as on Hick read the Scripture lesson compared with the price in the United States, those who own automobiles find the upkeep and cost of operation The Treasurer's report was then read, followed by a guitar selection Jane Woodbeck. A recitation

TAX OF 7 CENTS ON GASOLINE WILL BE ALTOGETHER TOO HIGH

(Pembroke Bulletin)

If the Ontario Government has this idea in their heads, as reported, the sooner they abandon it, the better. There are objections to any increase in the gasoline tax which cannot be ignored. (1) Taxes in Ontario must come down, not go up. (2) It costs now too much to operate an automobile. With the high price already paid for gas, as compared with the price in the United States, those who own automobiles find the upkeep and cost of operation put a sour taste in the mouths of tourists, and do us harm. The Ontario Government will be well advised to stop spending instead of increasing the taxes which are already too high.

What will the municipalities do with this one cent tax on gasoline if the money should be handed to them? Simply keep on spending. Where have the 6 cents, the present tax, gone? Not on our highways, or they would be in far better condition.

A ROAD HAZARD

(Cobourg World)

It is more than time that laws governing the use of highways for freight transportation were drastically revised.

At present, anyone who pays the tax on a truck of any kind is able to send it on the road with an almost unlimited load, overworking and underpaying the driver in many cases, and other users of the road must take the consequences.

Many of the present-day trucks looming monstrous on the highway and dragging behind them even more bloated trailers, have all the thundering oppressiveness of a railroad train. The struggling railway companies would have to put a three-man crew to handle the leviathan, but on the road one driver is supposed to be able to handle it over long stretches of road. The danger is evident.

Even worse, because more frequent, is the under-powered truck. Everyone who drives meets it frequently on the travelled roads. The thing pounds along at forty-five to fifty miles an hour on the level and downhill, keeping place in the traffic stream. Then it comes to a hill, and in a hundred yards its insufficient power is labouring along with it at fifteen miles an hour or less, as it strives to make the climb in bottom gear.

It takes little time for a string of a dozen cars to get stuck behind the under-powered truck. Drivers become impatient and take chances in passing on the hill, with the consequent risk and frequent occurrence of accidents. If they keep themselves in hand and drive carefully, with due observance of the rules of the road, as they would, they are badly delayed on their journey.

Getting behind one such truck can make a difference of fifteen minutes in the time between Cobourg and Toronto. And it is no rare event for a driver to find himself in such a predicament twice or three times on that typical journey.

It should be an easy matter for the highway department to arrange for testing of motor trucks to ensure that before they are licensed for use they demonstrate their ability to keep up a normal rate of speed on any gradient of road, with the full load that they are entitled to carry.

BARREL STAVES AND SKIS

When the snow begins to fly and covers the hills and valleys with a blanket of white, then is the time when many are thinking about a pair of skis. There are those who are fortunate enough to be able to purchase them but there are others who cannot. Ingenuity then has to enter upon the scene. The old apple barrel lends itself to the occasion. The staves are strong and tough, can be smoothed nicely and made very slippery; with a strap fastened on each stave the skis are all ready.

Then too during the warm summer months the barrel stave finds further use sometimes having its place in the body work of a canoe or skiff; and it is a common thing to see a hammock made from the staves of a barrel.

The making of barrels is divided into two divisions — slack and tight cooperage. Slack cooperage, or barrels with comparatively loose seams, for the shipping of dry products such as lime, potatoes, apples, dry fish, flour, cereals, nails and other products that do not require a water-tight

NEW TYPE OF PHONE INVENTED BY BELL TELEPHONE CO.

A new magnetic type of telephone which requires no power other than the speaker's own voice, has been developed by the Bell Telephone Laboratories in New York City. The necessary electricity is generated by the voice instead of by batteries or other sources.

"Voice-powered" telephones are designed not for connection with private exchanges or central offices, but rather for communication in mines, on forest ranges, at camps, aboard ships, or wherever batteries or other usual means of power may not be available.

Voice waves striking the diaphragm of this type of instrument vibrate an armature operating inside a powerful magnet and a coil of wire to other similar telephones, where the currents are reproduced into speech.

One model of this "voice-powered" instrument weighs less than two pounds. In its square-shaped rubber case, it is small enough to be held in the palm of one's hand. Its cone-shaped diaphragm serves as both transmitter and receiver, much as did the diaphragm in the earliest telephones. A somewhat larger model, designed for wall installation, has a separate transmitter and receiver.

Both models have tiny cranks for signaling. Turning them causes the diaphragm to emit a siren-like tone to signal the person called. — The Blue Bell.

COVERING THE WORLD OF SPORT

The picture of New York Yankees riding roughshod over the best the National League has had to offer in the past three world series, and the way the American Leaguers have dominated the annual inter-league all-star game has given plenty of material to those who are inclined to argue that the American League plays a superior brand of ball to the National. The latter, it is pointed out, haven't won a series since Dizzy and Paul Dean won two games each for St. Louis Cardinals to edge out Detroit Tigers back in 1934. In the past ten years, the American League partisans argue, their favourites have won no less than seven world championships. Maybe they're right. Maybe the American loop does harbor a classier collection of ball clubs. But was it ever thus? Not by the proverbial jugful!

The National League is the original major circuit. It was formed away back in 1876, and was the only major league until 1900 when the American league came into being. Even then, the haughty Nationals refused to recognize the upstart Americans as of "A" rating, and designed to meet them in post-season play. An unofficial world series was staged between Pittsburgh (N.L.) and Boston (A.L.) in 1903, but the following year when Boston again won the American and challenged the New York Giants, champions of the elder circuit, Manager John McGraw of the latter club was indignant. His reply to the challenge of the Boston was that he did not wish to "endanger the standing of my club by sending it against a minor league club."

That caustic utterance almost precipitated another baseball war such as had ensued between the National and the outlaw Federal association. Ban Johnson, president of the American League and enemy of McGraw, almost set a new high in verbal pyrotechnics, but saner heads intervened and the two leagues got together in the winter of 1904-05 to talk things over. As a result of this meeting, it was decided to stage an annual post-season series to begin in 1905. They did this more to placate the irate Johnson than with any thought that the series would become a gold mine of unparalleled kind. The series originated as a good-will gesture to the young American League, today is baseball's biggest payoff, with over a million dollars being taken in each year at the annual grand finale. And while it may gall the National League champions to take it on the chin with regularity, the losing players no doubt draw some "small" consolation from the fact that they each get about $5,000 bonus to take home to mama as their share of the booty.

QUESTIONS DEPT. — What club won the first world series?

"Some men achieve fame, others have fame thrust upon them." So goes the old saying, and we will place "Lucky" Lou Nova in the latter category. Two weeks ago he was an unknown but ambitious heavyweight prize fighter. Today he is being hailed as the most promising White Hope on the flat horizon. For while promoters, managers and scouts tour the country in search of big, strong lads with ring potentialities in the hopes of cashing in on some of the wealth that will go to the white man who can "dethrone Heavyweight Champion Joe Louis, Nova was around and about all the time.

So far as fame thrusting itself upon the 23-year-old Californian, if Bob Pastor (the fellow who once stayed ten rounds with Louis by back-peddling faster than the champ could travel) had not gashed his leg with an axe while training, Nova would never have gotten a match with Gunnar Barlund. And, if he hadn't got the match Nova certainly never would have stopped the rugged Finn in the seventh round to precipitate himself into the thick of the elimination tournament to find a suitable opponent for Louis.

Nova will probably be matched with either Tommy Farr, the Welshman who drew the plaudits of the sports world with his game stand against Louis last year; Max Baer, come-backing ex-titlerholder, or Tony Galento, the rough-tough-and-nasty saloon-keeper from Newark, N.J. A win over anyone of these top-ranking challengers would place Nova well on the way to a title go with Louis.

Is he really a comer, or will his next bout send Lou Nova back to the realm of the unknown as fast as he leaped from it? That is the question troubling the citizenry on Cauliflower Alley these days. The tip-off may lay in the word passed on by several experts who have witnessed the new sensation in action — they say he looks better than Gene Tunney did at a similar stage in his career. And that, brethren, is the stamp of approval in any man's language.

ONE YEAR AGO IN SPORT — Vancouver, Oct. 12, 1937 — The Canadian Amateur Lacrosse Association in annual session here today decided to end its affiliation with the Amateur Athletic Union of Canada. The word "Amateur" was deleted from the official title, and the association gave a broad definition of an amateur, including in this category professionals in other sports. The lacrosse body thus became the third Dominion sports governing body to bolt from the A.A.U. of C., the hockey and basketball fraternities having taken similar action previously.

We knew him as a kid. We saw him pitch his first junior game. We watched him climb to senior amateur and then minor professional ranks, with a feeling of personal pleasure. And we got a big thrill when he received his chance toward the close of the 1937 season with Washington Senators of the American League.

We refer to Joseph Victor Lawrence Kraskauskas, Canada's only big league pitcher, who won his last four starts this season for the Senators to clinch a berth on the 1939 squad.

Last Saturday we took a jaunt to Hamilton to see Joe pitch against an all-star American League team headed by Billy Rogell of Detroit Tigers, in aid of charity. We saw a different pitcher from the one we last saw in Brockville in 1936, but he was the same earnest, serious-faced kid, unspooled by big league fame. We asked Joe how he accounted for his lack of control in early starts, and how he overcame this weakness. Krasky's reply was "I guess I took too much advice. Everyone was eager to help me and I tried to profit by the tips they handed out, figuring they knew more about it than I did. When Bucky Harris (manager of the Senators) found out, he told me to lay off the advice of the wise guys and pitch my own way. When I did, my control came back, and I'm sure I'll win plenty of games for Washington next term."

ANSWERS DEPT. — Boston Red Sox, champions of the American League defeated Pittsburgh Pirates, winners of the National League pennant, by five games to three in the first world series in 1903 (series was best 5 in 9). This series was the result of challenges and acceptances, and did not have league supervision. The first official series was in 1905 and New York Giants (N.L.) beat Philadelphia Athletics (A.L.) four games to one.

BELLEVILLE MARKET

Eggs shot upwards sharply on Saturday market on Saturday's Belleville market. "A" selects were offered in most cases at thirty-eight cents per dozen, a three cent increase over last week's quotations although in some cases vendors demanded forty cents for select stock. Mediums were available at thirty-five cents per dozen with pullets and some ungraded stocks at thirty-five and thirty-four cents respectively.

Farmers' butter prices remained steady with two-pound rolls moving well at sixty-five cents each, with "singles" selling at thirty-five cents. The red and yellow of the apples, the blue of the grape and the gold of the peach provided a touch of natural colour to the sordidness of the outside market with the greens of vegetables furnishing an additional touch to the drabness of the day.

Macintosh Reds and St. Lawrence headed the apple display with the former selling at fifty and sixty cents per hamper for windfalls, and from one dollar upward for tree-picked fruit. The latter sold at thirty cents per basket. Tolman Sweets were available selling at thirty-five cents per six-quart lot.

Flemish Beauty pears at the height of production and flavour were offered at $1.75 per hamper lot, with Clapps Favourite selling at the same price. Blue and white grapes were plentiful and moved well at thirty and thirty-five cents per basket. Peaches were not as abundant as usual but moved fairly briskly at thirty-nine cents per basket.

Home grown tomatoes continued their slight upward trend in prices with bushel lots offered at forty-five cents each. Sweet corn in yellow and white varieties sold at fifteen cents per dozen ears. Chinese lettuce, radishes, beets, carrots sold at five cents bunch lots. Cabbage and cauliflower in a choice display was offered at from eight cents per head upwards. A few mushrooms were noted, that sold at twenty-five cents per six-quart basket.

Potatoes remained steady at last week's quotations with bushel lots selling at fifty cents and bags at seventy-five.

A fine fish offering was available to lovers of this food with fresh whitefish and lake trout selling at eighteen cents and twenty cents per pound respectively. Fresh pickerel attracted a number of shoppers with prices at eighteen cents per pound. Mudcats were quoted at two pounds for twenty-five cents with panfish at fifteen cents per dozen.

LUMBERING IN ALGONQUIN PARK

Lumbering is in full swing in Algonquin Park. In addition to operations continued from previous years, the Barrys Bay Lumber Company has established a camp for cutting in the Smoke Lake - Canoe Lake district. This is one of the most popular recreational areas in the park. It is also the site of several boys' and girls' camps.

It is a shock to many to learn that lumbering is still carried on in Algonquin Park, which has become famous throughout North America as a summer playground. Its unrivalled system of lakes and rivers draws thousands of tourists every year and the number is steadily increasing.

It is a sad commentary on the way Ontario's forest wealth has been dissipated if we find it necessary to sacrifice our beauty spots and our playgrounds for the sake of the lumber they will produce.

If, unfortunately, it is necessary to lumber Algonquin Park, the shores of lakes, the margins of roads and trails and similar areas frequented by summer tourists should be preserved unspoiled by sparing the trees within two or three hundred yards of lakes, roads and trails.

It is a notorious fact that the forest fire risk is greatly increased by the slash left behind by lumbering operations. The people of Ontario will not forgive those responsible for preserving Algonquin Park if they permit lumbermen to destroy the beauty of its lakes and trails or to create conditions which result in destructive fires.

How Minnesota Defines a State Park

The Minnesota Department of Conservation defines a state park as "a typical portion of the state's original domain of adequate size, whereby a small part may be provided for concentrated use, and the remainder preserved in primeval condition, accessible only by a system of foot trails and waterways, by which the future generations may study the flora, fauna and geologic structure of a beneficent Nature, unspoiled, unimproved and unblemished by Man's attempt to improve on the work of the Master Engineer."

WEAVER — MEYERS

Standards of gladiolus, palm and fern in King Street United Church in Trenton formed a pretty background Saturday afternoon, October 1st, for a wedding of interest when Miss Virginia Ethel Meyers, granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Murdoff, Trenton, became the bride of Mr. Ralph Watson Weaver, Ottawa, son of Mrs. L. S. Weaver and the late Mr. Weaver, of Trenton. The ceremony was performed by Rev. S. C. Moore, of Toronto, assisted by the minister, Rev. J. U. Robins.

Given in marriage by her father, Mr. Fred Meyers, of Brighton, the bride was lovely in a gown of imported starched lace, over taffeta in Pagan white. Fashioned on high empire lines, the bodice front was daintily tucked at the high neckline and at the raised waistline, forming soft fullness. The fitted bodice back was centred with a long line of tiny chiffon-covered buttons and corded loops. The long Florentine sleeves with shoulder fullness were tight fitting and tapered off to a point over the hand. The long skirt in panel formation, touched the floor in front, the back forming a long bridal train.

An individual headdress designed with three satin cords touching at the back and spreading over the head, held in place her bridal veil of illusion net. The veiling joined the headdress at the back in ruffled effect, the deep filmy folds extending beyond the train of her gown. The bride wore white taffeta sandals and carried a sheaf of pale pink mums.

Miss Gwen Cox, of Ottawa, her maid of honour, wore a princess gown of orchid taffeta. The bridesmaids, Miss Sylvia Weaver, sister of the groom, and Miss Betty Gillespie, Toronto, cousin of the bride were attired in green and pink respectively. All attendants were gownned alike in taffeta gowns made on princess lines with boleros, shoulder-length veils held in place with flowers and matching their frocks. They carried sheaves of mums in harmonizing colours.

Little Mary Blakely, cousin of the bride, made a charming picture as flower girl in white taffeta with long skirt and ruching on the bottom. She wore a matching joke bonnet and carried a nosegay of old-fashioned flowers. The groom was attended by Mr. Douglas Kinney, and the ushers were Mr. Clare Northey and Mr. Harry Lafferty.

Wedding music was played by Mr. Leslie Hearts, church organist. During the signing of the register Mrs. Patterson sang beautifully "Because."

After the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's grandmother, Mrs. J. B. Murdoff, on King Street. Mrs. Murdoff received in a gown of black lace over taffeta with corsage of pink carnations. Mrs. Weaver was attired in burgundy velvet with corsage of white carnations and lily-of-the-valley. A buffet luncheon was served and Mrs. Fred Meyers, Brighton, and Mrs. George Weaver, Stirling, poured tea.

Later the happy couple left by motor on a trip to Toronto, Buffalo and other western points, the bride travelling in a smart plaid suit with brown accessories and over this she wore a tailored coat. On their return they will reside in Ottawa.

Out-of-town guests included Mr. and Mrs. D. P. Gillespie and family, Rev. S. C. and Mrs. Moore, of Toronto; Mr. and Mrs. William Gordon of Plainville; Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Kellogg, of Cobourg; Mr. and Mrs. George Weaver, Miss Mina Dracup, Miss Nina Carlisle and Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Thompson, Stirling, Mr. and Mrs. D. A. Weaver, Belleville; Mr. and Mrs. Anderson, Mr. and Mrs. Len Hawkins and the Misses Hawkins and Miss Gwen Cox, Ottawa.

Static By The Editor

"Twas Ever Thus
"Where are these perfect husbands we hear so much about?" asked a man in a suburban train the other evening.
"Usually married to the woman next door, I find," replied another, smiling.

"Oh, no — not yet. We have several more payments on ours."

Mrs. Horner: "Why, son?"
Andy: "Well, every time I get the thread near the eye it blinks."

The Solution
Mother: "Jack did you post those letters for me?"

Jack: "Yes, mother, but just as I was dropping them into the pillar-box, I noticed that you had put the stamps on wrong. The foreign letter had three half-penny stamps and the home letter the two-penny-half-penny. But I soon put it right."

Mother: "But how did you change the stamps?"
Jack: "I didn't — I changed the addresses."

The Confession
The mother of two small boys went into the bathroom to find the elder of the two in the bath tub and the smaller mopping up water spilled over the top of the over-full tub.

BEAUTY PROBLEMS

Barbara Lynn

Eminent Beauty Authority and Adviser, who writes weekly articles on Beauty

BEAUTY AFTER THE SUN!

Now that Summer has passed, it has left, in addition I hope to pleasant memories, some beauty problems for most of us. Nearly everyone is a sun-worshipper, but unfortunately, old Sol is less merciful to some than to others. Our skins do not all react the same way.

No matter how kindly the sun treats you, your skin has been losing natural oil in the sun-bathing process. It is very necessary that you devote extra attention to cleansing your skin with a good cleansing cream and nourishing it at night with a rich tissue cream that contains Vitamin F, because this is the only one that will penetrate the skin successfully, combating wrinkles, lines, enlarged pores and dryness of the skin. Pay particular attention to the skin about the throat and eyes.

Feeding the skin with cream helps to restore the natural oil lost in the burning Summer months. Failure to take this elementary precaution prepares a dryer skin, and wrinkles and lines will form more rapidly. You know how devastating this can be to beauty!

Sun-bathing tends to enlarge the pores but occasional use of a skin tonic or face freshener will take care of this for you, if you also use a skin cream.

The Dangerous Age

For those who are approaching 30, and over, sunning-time is doubly precarious. For it is so much more difficult after this age to restore the natural moisture of the skin. It calls for even greater care; you simply can't be too fussy about your nighttime face care! Use a nourishing tissue cream, with a Vitamin F base, to keep those distressing lines at bay. Take especial care around the eyes. Pat the cream in — don't rub it. You can smooth the skin, as this helps to erase lines, but avoid stretching it.

This treatment should be carried out religiously every night, and if you have a naturally dry skin, be sure and leave on a thin film of cream over night.

My leaflet on "The Face and its Care" will help you conserve your facial beauty, and you may obtain a copy of any of the following leaflets by sending a 3c stamp for each one required: How to Slim; Reducing Fat Spots; Underweight; Bust Development; Superfluous Hair; Care of the Feet; your Hair; Eye Beauty; Hand Beauty. At the same time you are welcome to ask about your own beauty worries. I shall be glad to advise you personally and without publicity.

Please mention the name of this paper, and address your letter to Barbara Lynn, N.O. Box 75, Station B, Montreal, Que.

TORIES TO NAME LEADER
DECEMBER 8-9

Candidates for the Ontario Conservative leadership are marshalling their forces in preparation for a party convention on December 8 and 9 to choose a successor to Hon. Earl Rowe, member of the House of Commons for Dufferin-Simcoe, who desires to relinquish the post at the "earliest opportunity."

Date of the convention was set at a meeting of the Ontario Conservative Association. Delegates from all Provincial constituencies voted 200 to 89 in approving the December dates.
They were contained in an amendment to a motion, calling for an April convention, a motion sponsored by Alderman George Sloane, Ottawa.

At least two prominent candidates for the leadership have appeared.
Leopold Macaulay, party legislative leader, and Col. George Drew, Toronto, barrister, author and soldier, who ran unsuccessfully as an Independent Conservative in the last Provincial election. Col. Drew is a former party organizer.

SMALL ADVERTISEMENTS PULL

Some businessmen, whose establishments are not gigantic, are known to harbour the belief that because the possibilities they envision for their businesses will not warrant the use of large advertising space in the newspaper, advertising will not pay in their case. No belief was ever more erroneous.

Small advertisements consistently placed in this newspaper week after week will bring new customers and build prestige for any business whatever its present size.

Small advertisements are read as well as large ones, and the pulling power of an ad. is gauged more by how it is written and what it advertises than by the amount of space it occupies. Some of the largest businesses in the world today, whose success is directly attributable to their persistence in newspaper advertising, started with the tiniest space it was possible to buy in the newspapers. Some started, in fact, with classified advertisements.

Many an individual has been surprised at the results obtained from a small want ad. offering some discarded article for sale. Nothing appeals to people like the opportunity to annex a bargain, and the second-hand goods for which the owner has no further use often is exactly what some other person is looking.

THE VALUE OF A SMILE

The following dissertation on "the value of a smile" is posted in the employees' room of a large department store in Pittsburgh:

It costs nothing, but creates much.
It enriches those who receive, without impoverishing those who give.
It happens in a flash and the memory of it sometimes lasts forever.
None is so rich he can get along without it, and none so poor, but is not for its benefits.
It creates happiness in the home, festers good will in business, and is the counterclaim of friends.

It is rest to the weary, daylight to the discouraged, and sunshine to the sad, and Nature's best antidote for trouble.

Yet it cannot be bought, begged, or stolen, for it is something that is no earthly good to anybody until it is given away!

And if it happens that some of our patrons should be too tired to leave you a smile, may we ask you to give one of yours?

For nobody needs a smile so much as those who have none left to give.

BOY SHOT HUNTING AT OAK LAKE

Donald Davis, Belleville, was accidentally shot in the right hip on Monday afternoon, while hunting for woodchucks and rabbits, at Oak Lake.
The boy was walking through the woods north of the lake, when his gun accidentally caught on a twig and discharged. The bullet from the 22 calibre rifle passed through the flesh on his hip. He was aided to the car by his companions, Dan Fairman, Roy, Charles and Raymond Sager, and rushed to Stirling, where his wounds were attended by Dr. Pedley. Later the boy was taken to Belleville, where he is resting comfortably.

BELLEVILLE PRESBYTERY
W. M. S. MEETS

The 13th annual meeting of the Belleville Section Woman's Missionary Society of the United Church of Canada was held in West Huntingdon
United Church on Thursday, October 6th, with two hundred and twenty-five in attendance. The church was decorated with autumn flowers, potted plants and vegetables, of all descriptions to represent the Thanksgiving season.

The morning session opened at 9.30 with the vice-President, Mr. S. W.
Spafford, of Aikins, in charge. Miss Georgia Pitman presided at the piano and all sang the Doxology, following the call to worship.

Plainfield auxiliary took charge of the worship service based on Thanksgiving, with Mrs. Harry Harrison, Mrs.
Arthur Hall, Miss Phyllis Hall and Mrs. Clarence Hall assisting. The following committees were appointed:
press work for Belleville Daily, Mrs.
E. K. Hubble, for Trenton papers, Mrs.
Mrs. E. L. Fraser, for News-Argus,
Mrs. Percy MacMullen; for Courtesy, Mrs. J. Daniels, Foxboro, Mrs. S. Westover, Aikens, Mrs. T. Walters, Belleville. The efficient Secretary, Mrs.
E. Denyes, of Plainfield, received an appointment to Presbyterial in the Spring, and Mrs. Harry Harrison was appointed as Secretary of the section.

Mrs. S. J. Wilson graciously welcomed the ladies on behalf of West Huntingdon, and Mrs. H. C. Martin, of St.
Paul's Auxiliary, Stirling, replied to the welcome. All of the auxiliaries excepting two answered the roll call.
Mrs. Earl Denyes gave a very interesting story of the year and said in this section we have 32 afternoon auxiliaries, 2 evening auxiliaries and one affiliated society. These have a total membership of 939, an increase of 61 and total givings were $5,023.37, an increase of $211.08. Sixty-three per cent. of the women of the congregations belong to the W.M.S. Rural sections show a greater percentage than the towns. Seventy-five per cent give through envelopes. Aikens gave an average of 8.92 cents per member and Belleville Bridge St. 8.81. Three mission circles gave splendid reports and over twenty mission bands with 330 members and $243.50 of givings;

also fourteen Baby Bands.

Mrs. W. Fitchett, West Huntingdon, sang "The Holy City", and Mrs.
Harry Coutts, Trenton, dedicated the offering. Mrs. W. Osborne, Belleville, the new Stewardship Secretary for the Presbyterial said "Good Stewards" must have faith in God and faith in their fellow-workers. Good stewards must pave the way and let Jesus do the rest. She read several promises of reward as given in the Scriptures.
At this juncture Mrs. F. L. Hooper, Napanea, president of Belleville Presbyterial, was introduced.

Miss Eileen MacMullen, Mount Pleasant, Rawdon, gave a paper on "Getting the most out of our Magazines." She urged individual reading of the Missionary Monthly and suggested that Presidents use it freely at their meetings. Both the monthly and "World Friends" make excellent Christmas gifts. Miss Cora Kilborn, R.N., home on furlough from Cheng-tu Hospital, West China, was given an ovation and she sketched her trip by air, train and boat as she travelled home. She also described the irrigation system on the Chengtu Plain.

Mrs. Percy MacMullen, Branch Press Secretary, explained about the press scrap books and urged that a few be made in this section and displayed at Lindsay next April. The address of the Treasurer of Belleville Presbyterial is Mrs. Frank Herrington, Napanea, instead of Picton. The Missionary Monthly Secretaries were urged to canvass the members in October for new subscriptions.

Mrs. J. W. Robbins, Belleville, conducted the Memorial Service for seventeen members who have finished their labours here and have been called to Higher Service. She said "Some day our names will be read," so she urged the women to consider how they spend each day. Are you drifting or choosing? Life is a treasure for investment and all that we attempt will tell if we have done our best. West Huntingdon ladies served an appetizing dinner in the Orange Hall and Church shed.

Afternoon

Mount Pleasant (Rawdon) auxiliary conducted the afternoon worship service based on "Love your neighbour as yourself", with Mrs. Percy Mac-Mullen, President, Mrs. John Holmes and Mrs. Ross Hoard, in charge.

Mrs. E. Farnsworth, Belleville, president of the W.C.T.U., gave a Temperance address on "What Women Can do." God has given every woman a great interest in the home, and as women set the standards, so the social order is almost all in women's hands.

Miss Rachel Fox splendidly portrayed the highlights of the four days at School for Leaders held at Whitby in August under the title "What you Missed. Mrs. Frederick, of Chatterton sang "Peace, God's gift of Love." Mrs.
F. L. Hooper brought a message urging the women to give of their time, talents and money. Mrs. Spafford gave a message from Miss Elsie Hunt, R.N., of Bayside, our own missionary at Cold Lake, Alberta. Mrs.
Semple, Belleville, dedicated the offering. The guest speaker, Miss Cora Kilborn, R.N., gave a lengthy address dealing with conditions in West China and the need of both hospitals and nurses. Her mother, Dr. Wretta Kilborn, who was present in the audience was the first medical doctor who went to that area in 1893. She vividly described hospital work, school for nursing, the alumni association, also many practical problems which the missionaries gave in this new Chengtu hospital which was built in 1915. As yet they haven't a good water system and they need Central heating and better lighting. If we saw the vision forty years ago then it is still our responsibility as T. B. is very prevalent in that land today. She appealed for more young people who are trained as nurses and doctors to offer themselves for service and proved to all the ladies in attendance that "Foreign missionaries are worthwhile."

Mrs. Joe Daniel gave the Courtesy report. An invitation to visit Zion in 1939 was accepted.

Auxiliaries are asked to give a special donation as a love gift for the Peace fund. Donations to be sent to Mrs. H. B. Johnson, R.R. 5, Belleville, before the end of this year. The Secretary of World Peace or Christian Citizenship in each auxiliary is responsible for collecting this.

Rev. J. E. Beckel, Rawdon Circuit, dismissed the service.

Miss Eileen MacMullen was in charge of the literature and sold nearly fourteen dollars worth of books and leaflets.

The Rally was a decided success and the ladies of West Huntingdon can be justly proud of the splendid success of this event.

Rapture Beyond

SECOND INSTALMENT

Synopsis

Jocelyn Harlowe, raised in a French convent, at the age of eighteen joins her mother, Marcella, in New York. Worried about her safety, because she is unfamiliar with the modern world and has developed into a beautiful woman, her mother's first wish is to get her safely married. Attending her first ball, Jocelyn meets Felix Kent, rich, handsome and nineteen years older than she, whom she had known at the age of twelve and who tells her that he has waited all those years to marry her. Encouraged by her mother, he comes to the apartment often and as the last instalment ended he had just kissed her — her first kiss.

"Oh, no," she whispered. "Oh . . . no . . . no . . . no. I can't."

Kent came toward her, not close, for her arms were stretched out to keep him at a distance.

"Darling, I'm so sorry. I beg your pardon. I know I frightened you. Please do forgive me." He felt as though he had been sent back in a dream to play the part of a Victorian lover. I want you so. I want you to marry me."

After a considerable silence Jocelyn composed herself.

"You won't do that again?"

"Not until you wish it. Please Jocelyn, give me just the tip of your silly little convent fingers."

She let him take her hand and kiss it. She brushed the other hand across her eyes and smiled.

"Then it's all right?" he asked her. "I think so. Yes. If my mother . . ."

"Your mother gave me her consent at that same costume ball when I was the Jack of Diamonds. Do you mean this, child? I am in earnest."

"Do I mean that I will marry you . . . you are asking?"

"Yes."

He had given her the choice, but her freedom actually was not greater than that of a caged bird. All about her mind and her life and her will stood the walls of her inexperience, of her mother's silent coercion, of the unfair opportunity that had been given to this older man.

"May I have a piano?" whispered Jocelyn.

The question sounded so like mere childishness that Felix laughed out, and again, but very carefully, put his arm about her. She came to him but not so softly, so completely, as before.

"You may have a piano, my darling. You may have anything you want in all the world."

"I want a lot," she said.

The piano was a symbol. All the material world was a symbol . . . of some desire, some need, whose very name she did not know. But how was such a man as Kent to understand?

"You shall have everything," promised the Jack of Diamonds.

It was an engagement in the old literal sense of that term for marital bargains; an engagement entered upon by one party in the blindest ignorance of the price expected of her.

Early that morning, creeping into her mother's bed where Marcella lay, broad awake — she prayed through nights of fearful sleeplessness — Jocelyn asked her in a quivering undertone:

"Why did I feel like that when Felix kissed me, Mother?"

"Feel like what?"

"Like . . . killing him."

"You are a foolish, wicked child. Go back to bed. Felix will teach you everything you ought to know. It is quite right and natural that you should be frightened by your first kiss."

"I wasn't frightened, Mother."

"Yes, you were. You misinterpret your own emotion. It was not Felix Kent you wished to kill."

"Who then?"

"It was . . . yourself. Something in you that woke. You were frightened, furious, ashamed, at what went through you under his kiss."

Jocelyn dropped her head and presently withdrew it and her soft clinging arms. She groped her way back to her room.

The engagement of Miss Jocelyn Harlowe of New York City to Mr. Felix Kent of Chicago with all possible details of information was presently in due form announced. And Jocelyn wore upon her third finger a diamond as splendid as a star.

"You shall be married in the spring after a four months' engagement," Marcella promised and added to her chosen son-in-law, alone, "I want her to get used to you, Felix, so that we won't have a runaway bride on our hands. As for her further education, I must leave that to you, to your kindness and patience and wisdom, Felix, for after all, what can I tell her that would help her to be a happy wife?"

This waiting question did not startle Felix. He gave Jocelyn's mother scant attention, being preoccupied with problems of tutelage, and with a vision of the education soon to be given to an unsuspecting golden girl.

There were evenings, however, even now, when his role of restraint was difficult to maintain. On one such evening he left Jocelyn abruptly with a manufactured excuse.

Marcella began during the period of Jocelyn's engagement to attend evening services regularly. So it happened, that when Felix left so early Jocelyn was left entirely alone. Even the servant was away.

For a while Jocelyn stayed near the window, leaning against its frame, looking tirelessly at the wonderful great city. A city of Mars. So strange so bright, so tall.

At last she went back into the room and sat down by her piano, brooding.

She played her own music as she had not been able to do of late. She played for a long while.

The door from the passage which led back toward the bedrooms opened softly. Jocelyn whirled about, surprised. She could see no one. But the door had moved.

Then she saw him, coming round a great throne of a chair which had interposed between them. The cripple. The little bent man, sidelong, with bright eager eyes.

Jocelyn would have screamed but he arrested her with speech.

"Don't be frightened, Jocelyn," he said gently in a voice full of pleasantness, "I wouldn't scare . . . I wouldn't hurt you for the world. You see, you poor little child, I am your father."

And Jocelyn recognized him.

"I'm not afraid of you," she said — a queer first speech from child to parent.

She put out her hand.

Nick caught at it and tried to straighten himself to his daughter's level. Rheumatism had him in its clutches and the motion cost him a grimace. But it succeeded and he stood there, sidelong still, but at a height even a little taller than her own.

"Thanks," he said dryly. "I'm grateful for small mercies." His eyes ran rapidly about the room.

"I'm glad my daughter is not afraid of me. I thought by this time you'd be made . . . of fear — I used to call you 'Lynda'."

"Sit here beside me on the sofa. I won't stay long. And you mustn't tell your mother that I've been here. I won't come here again. I saw you at the end of that awning on the night of your first ball. I read it in the papers and waited there and I caught myself in the stupid mistake of falling in love with you. Then I saw your engagement announced. That scared me somehow. It's so soon. You're only eighteen and you can't know anything. I'm ill."

Jocelyn, seated beside him, a strange warm surge of welcome in her blood, raised his hand gently.

"I'd love to take care of you."

"Couldn't stand a woman's fussing, Lynda. Couldn't even bear a woman around me now. I came to ask you . . . are you happy?"

"Yes. And thrilled."

"U-hum. I suppose so. Will you get his picture for me?"

"Sure thing. Your young man's."

She laughed. The whole experience began to be an astonishing adventure. This father had a way with him that opened a door in her heart. She hurried to her room to get the picture.

Coming back light-footed she found him returning to his place from some swift furtive investigation of the room. She noticed this, but in her confused excitement it made on her at the time no particular impression.

Nick drew her down beside him and bent over the large handsome photograph.

"Not bad looking. Well set up. Got a tight mouth and a big eye. Generous chap, Lynda?"

"Oh, isn't he?" she showed her ring.

"That! He'd have to give you that. I mean other presents."

"He's given me a lovely wrist watch. Shall I get it to show you?"

"No. Sit still. I thought convent girls were always composed. Did they treat you well?"

"Yes. They were lovely to me. But I can't talk about the nuns now, Father. Really. I was glad to leave them and to come to America. To New York. I wanted to begin . . . to live."

"And now you're . . . living, eh?"

"I soon shall be."

"Poor kid! When will you be married?"

He was listening all the while for the sound of an arrival in the building.

"In two months now, Father."

"U-hum. You'll be a pretty bride. More than pretty. Will your mother deck you out with all her jewels?"

Jocelyn threw back her head and laughed.

"Mother's jewels! Can you imagine

HIGHLIGHTS ON HALLOWE'EN

"Fellow spook!—You are cordially invited to attend a Ghost Convention, at the home of —" So runs an invitation to a Halloween party.

Hallowed, or holy, evening is really an autumn festival, just as May Day is a spring festival. Superstition robbed the holiday of its original meaning and surrounded it with all the mystery of ghosts, witches, spirits and hobgoblins. Because of these superstitious notions, Halloween appeals to the public fancy with all its old customs and traditions.

The ancient Druids had a great autumn festival which commenced at midnight, October 31st, and lasted throughout the following day, November 1st. Among other things, they believed that the great lord of death, Saman, called together all the wicked souls who have been condemned in the preceding twelve months to inhabit the bodies of animals. Because of the wicked spirits that prowled about on this night, they lit huge bonfires and kept a sharp lookout. Thus it is unquestionably from the Druids that we derive the belief that witches and ghosts walk abroad on Halloween, a belief still prevalent among certain rural peoples of Europe.

The Romans also had a festival about the first of November in honour of Pomona. Nuts and apples, tokens of the winter store of fruits, were roasted before great bonfires. It appears that certain Druidic ceremonies and these Roman ceremonies were grafted one upon the other to become our Halloween.

Originally the festival of Halloween was simple and was confined almost wholly to the church. But certain classes somehow took a peculiar interest in the festival, weird tales of spirits and goblins were circulated. They spread, and it became a general notion that ghosts and spirits walked abroad on Halloween. People tempered their fears with feasting. Halloween became perverted — instead of an evening hallowed to witches, ghosts and the supernatural.

The pumpkin is simply a symbol of the harvest and black cats, being the traditional companions of witches, are always present at Halloween.

Fun and frivolity are always present also, and autumn wouldn't be autumn without that evening when parties galore take place, lighted pumpkins glow in windows, white and ghostly arrayed children with false faces scamper through the usually frosty streets and door bells ring incessantly to the tune of "Charity please." — Blue Bell.

BEHIND THE HEADLINES
OTTAWA
 (By Dean Wilson)

What is Canada's role in the history-making drama which is being played right now in the theatre of international politics, particularly on the stages of Washington and London? This extremely interesting question is being asked by everyone along Parliament Hill and every experienced observer does not encounter any difficulty to discount the numerous rumours circulating at the present time on the subject of Canada's relations with the United States and the United Kingdom, which involves many vital questions that must be answered in order to facilitate an accurate and honest interpretation of this country's actions in any critical situation on the international scene.

In the first place, both the United States and the United Kingdom have quite a number of mutual interests in this country. Both world powers have invested several billion dollars in the economic structure of Canada and they must protect their huge financial interests at all costs. Uncle Sam did not join the League of Nations, and the fact that Canada is a member of the said League allows the greatest nation on the western hemisphere to exercise a strong influence in that international body through the voice of a very friendly and trusted neighbour. In other words, Canada acts as interpreter of both Uncle Sam and John Bull at Geneva. It is no secret that the United States is ready to offer cultural, financial and diplomatic assistance to the democracies of the world in any big conflict against dictatorships, even if this assistance is given through supposedly quick action in upholding the famous Monroe Doctrine on behalf of Canada. Both the United States and the British Commonwealth of Nations are determined to combat any signs of deliberate attempts of non-fulfilment of international contracts and to uphold religiously international rules of law and order. The United States with its like Japan with half as many people in an area less than one-tenth as large, or Germany with 75,000,000 inhabitants in a small area, or Italy with a population of over 40,000,000 in a land that is less than half the size of France. This is the most serious problem of the British Commonwealth of Nations, especially in Canada and Australia, and both Uncle Sam and John Bull must do something to satisfy a number of land-hungry nations where the birth rate is much higher and there is a continual increase of population entirely out of proportion to the economic developments.

Then again, there is the fact that both the United States and Canada have derived their political and cultural traditions from the Motherland, with the additional remark that many old prejudices have been forgotten and not only is there a profitable trade between the United States, Great Britain and Canada, but similar internal problems have cemented the relationships to the point where the common frontier of 8900 miles that borders on Canada and the United States is the only unfortified one in the world today. The standard of living, unemployment provisions, social enactments, adverse trade balances, lessened industrial activities, unbalanced budgets due to re-armament expenditures, and other common problems, have created similar sets of reactions, with the strong probability that Canada's interpretation of the British Commonwealth to the United States has brought about a steady increase of mutual understanding and friendly feelings between all the English-speaking peoples of the globe. There may be occasional strains in the relations between the two nations, but fundamentally they have too much in common ever to have any deadly quarrel. Peace, amity and trust exists mainly on account of Canada's fine example.

In these days when there are signs of grave menace to existing British interests and Britain's future as an international banker, carrier, trader, and as a world empire, the friendship of the United States through the strenuous efforts of Canada means more than it is possible to emphasize properly in a short article. If this country would not exercise this profound and respectful influence on the United States, there would be much less co-operation on the part of Washington because Uncle Sam does not want to become entangled in any European war; the Americans do not want to lose the war-debts that would automatically be wiped out by any act of war; with the added remark that this debt amounts to more than seven billion dollars; American private interests abroad would be seized as German property was seized in England in 1914, and it was never returned, involving the risk of more than twelve billion dollars at the present time! There would be a possibility that the United States would lose a hold on the island possessions in the Pacific and Caribbean; it is no secret that the Atlantic seaboard cities would be exposed to the dangers of air raids, though the coast may be impregnable to invasions by any other means; the American standards of living depend on the extensive and very valuable foreign trade and war would be certain to paralyze it. Furthermore, the United States is in keen competition against Great Britain not only in foreign trade, but in the British dominions as well; there is a sharp financial rivalry between Wall Street and Threadneedle Street; both parties compete for raw materials such as copper, rubber, oil, etc.; Uncle Sam and John Bull compete for top places in aviation, control of radio, telegraphic communications, apparatus for chemical warfare, and other matters. Yet in the face of all these facts, the relations between the two great world powers are continually improving and there is open discussion in official and unofficial circles that Uncle Sam's deep friendship for Canada may lead to a policy of open assistance and alliance with Great Britain in the event of any conflict involving the Motherland. What are the political indications that tend to this opinion or how can this be proved? This vital question will be answered in this column next week, particularly as it is observed along Parliament Hill. (Reproduction Prohibited, 1938, Educational Features Syndicate).

CANADIAN WOMEN'S DESIRE FOR RINGLESS STOCKINGS CAUSES LONG LEGAL BATTLE

Eve has been blamed for many things from the time she and Adam "agreed to disagree" in the Garden of Eden, but her modern counterpart, the Canadian woman, who buys silk stockings, has directly been responsible for a long-drawn-out legal battle over a patent for making hosiery free from rings or bands, all of which is traced back to woman's desire to make herself attractive.

The battle has just ended with a decision by the Exchequer Court of Canada that an inventor could not justify his claim to royalties for the use of a machine system which eliminates the objectionable rings or bands in silk hose.

A few years ago, women were satisfied with heavier weight silk stockings. Then came shorter skirts and women demanded more sheer stockings.

Manufacturers, who must meet the changing whims affecting this section of women's wear, began to ponder over the problem. Several devised ways and means of making these stockings but another trouble appeared on the horizon . . . the finer the stocking the more apparent became threads of uneven texture and colour which caused horizontal "bands" or "rings" to appear.

A "three-carrier" system of knitting the sheer quality hosiery was introduced and it was this innovation which led to law suits in Canada and the United States by those who claimed to be the inventors.

In the Exchequer Court Judgment, Mr. Justice McLean ruled that Charles A. Kaufman (against whom seven leading companies joined in a demand for impeachment of the patent) was not the inventor. This decision saves the payment by the Canadian full-fashioned hosiery industry of approximately $172,000 a year in royalties for an eighteen year period which amounts, in other words to a total saving of more than $3,000,000.

Now the spotlight will be thrown in the United States where the U. S. District Court of Philadelphia declares the "ringless" patent had not been infringed by an American company which had taken the same view as the Canadian concerns. An appeal from this judgment is expected to be heard.

The Canadian judgment of 26 pages traces the history of the weaving and knitting art and maintains that the principle now in use . . . the "three carrier" system . . . had been known and used in kindred arts for many years.

Natural silk stockings are made from silk yarn, each thread of which is composed of anywhere from two to twelve strands. These natural silk yarns being of an animal nature, are irregular or uneven in size and it is this irregularity which originally caused bands to become apparent in sheer hosiery. To eliminate the rings a former method was applied which became known as the "three carrier" system.

Under this system, each yarn is threaded to its own carrier and three carriers are used instead of one for knitting to diffuse the irregularities. It is this method which has met the claim of Canadian women for clear and sheer stockings.

The judgment in the Exchequer court points out that the principle of this "three carrier" method was established years before a patent for this invention was granted to Charles A. Kaufman on October 10, 1933.

A GEARLESS CAR INVENTED BY ITALIAN

A gearless car with only two pedals the accelerator and the brake, has been invented by Commendatore Salerni. The revolutionary device, which Commendatore Salerni anticipates will have a decided influence upon motor design, eliminates both clutch and gearbox, substituting for them as centrifugal pump which transmits the engine-power to the driving shaft.

Professor F. C. Lea in his report to the members of the British Association said:

"The car was driven at average speed of approximately 39 m.p.h. over the whole distance. The total distance covered was 761 miles, and the gasoline consumption was 21 m. p.g."

"The application of this new invention in substitution of the clutch and gear mechanism results in an improvement in the performance of the vehicle in get-away, general acceleration, hill climbing, drive in traffic and drive on the open road."

The driver, over long distances, in traffic, and climbing sinuous hills, is not wearied by decelerating and gear-changing. The mechanical construction of the transmitter is in every way simple and sound."

TIPS ON CARVING A ROAST TURKEY

Now you needn't feel awkward in carving the Christmas turkey. Here are the four most important steps in this precarious undertaking:

- 1.—Always turn the fowl on its side before carving.
2. Begin by cutting into the drum of the leg with a few clean strokes of the knife and then pull it back from the body.
- 3.—In slicing the meat from the leg carve toward the body of the bird.
4. In carving the breast, cut toward the plate with clean, slow strokes of the knife.

NEW LICENSE PLATES EASY TO READ

The question of license plate visibility, subject of so many gusty storms of controversy in 1938, appears to have been ushered right out of the picture for next year at least, judging by a preview of the 1939 motor vehicle markers given by the Department of Highways recently.

The artistic has given way completely the utilitarian in Ontario's election of a colour scheme for next year's markers, with white serial numbers on a jet black background replacing the current pale blue and paler rose combination. And yet in many respects the new plates are more artistic than any combination of more delicate hues in the past. They are certainly more legible.

Manufactured in the shops of Guelph Reformatory, where their predecessors have been turned out for several years, the new plates will carry the same heavy enamel and high gloss of past markers. The process, it was explained, is perhaps a bit more expensive, but the extra expense is more than made up by the increased durability of the numerals, which in turn means the necessity of fewer replacements in the course of a year.

Sole concession to the arts in the 1939 marker is seen in the fact that, as in the past three years, the crown occupies a prominent place in the design. Embossed and enamelled in white, the crown appears at the top centre of the plate, flanked by the numerals "1939". J. P. Bickell, Registrar of Motor Vehicles, who showed reporters the new plate, announced another innovation would also be introduced next year.

Medical doctors, who in recent years have been accorded the distinction of serial numbers beginning with the letter "D" will have an extra distinction next year, for their license plates will be treated with a special sand-blasting process. By this process, small particles of glass will be blown onto the numerals until they are completely coated. Tests have indicated plates treated in this way are more easily visible at night, the glass particles serving as reflectors by catching the rays of approaching headlights.

The possibility remains that dust collected on markers during travel over country roads, might interfere with the glass-coated numerals and it was for this reason that all markers were not given the treatment this year. If the treated group stands up under use during the year, Mr. Bickell said, it would be applied to all markers in 1940.

Motorists will not likely find 1939 markers available until much later this year than last, he said, and he intimated the new plates might not be distributed until after January 1.

WE NEED YOUR HELP—THIS YEAR! EVERY YEAR!

Needy children from all over the Province are treated regardless of race, creed or financial circumstance.

This policy has been continued for over 60 years in the firm belief that everyone who understands the facts would want this great work to continue . . . would agree that no Ontario child should be denied a chance for health or escape from deformity if mere money makes the difference.

Over 95% of our beds are in Public Wards.

The Hospital receives no support from the Toronto Federation for Community Service because patients are accepted from all parts of the Province.

We must therefore appeal to a humane and generous public to take care of an annual deficit . . . this year it is $68,000.00.

● Please mail a donation to the Appeal Secretary, 67 College Street, Toronto.
 The thanks of little children will be your reward.

The Hospital for Sick Children

Every morning in the year famous surgeons come to our operating rooms to donate their services. More than $100 operations are performed annually. But there are many more who need and the maintenance of the necessary service is very costly.

Since 1928 the service rendered by the Hospital has more than doubled. Last year 22,416 individual treatments were given. This service yields a small return—but not nearly enough.

The bride couple stood in front of an arch of evergreens and Autumn leaves supported by a huge white bell with beautiful plants in the background. Their attendants were Mr. and Mrs. William Heath, cousin of the groom and whose marriage took place at eleven a.m. the same day. Little Misses Betty Johnston and Jean Rennie, cousins of the bride were flower girls dressed in old rose taffeta silk floor length gowns, and blue satin sashes and rosebud wreaths on their hair and carried old-fashioned nosegays.

Tsk! Tsk!

The touring company had never been of the best, and when they reached the stage of playing to the family of the man who owned the little country theatre, and found that they left at the end of the first act, it was decided to break up.

Two of the actors set out to work their way back to London.

They were lucky enough to get a passage on a barge, and when passing through a lock they overheard this conversation:

"What you got on board this trip, Jim?"

"Load of fertilizer and a couple of actors, Bert."

The two actors looked at each other in silence, and sighed deeply. "Cyril," said one, "shall we never top the bill?"

ST. PAUL'S Y.P.U. ENTERTAINS

STAFF OF PUBLIC AND STAFF AND PUPILS OF HIGH SCHOOL
QUESTIONS ON MONDAY NIGHT

On Monday night the St. Paul's Young People's Organization re-opened for the new term with a large attendance of members and guests in attendance. As is the usual custom, the staff and pupils of the High School and the staff of the Public School were guests at this, the initial meeting of the fall season, and a very enjoyable and entertaining programme was presented. Mr. Donald Baxter, President of the Young People's Conference for the Bay of Quinte District, was present as special speaker for the event, and his address was greatly enjoyed and appreciated by those in attendance. His subject "Looking toward the East" was very timely and appropriate.

The meeting opened with a call to worship by the President, following which Rev. W. J. Scott led in prayer and Miss Kathleen Johnston read the Scripture lesson.

Miss Marjorie Hagerman, president of St. Paul's Young People's Society, extended a cordial welcome to all those present, and especially to the guests of the evening. Mr. Don Williams took charge of the remaining programme which included a duet by Misses Helen Jeffrey and Mauriletta McKee, piano solo by Don Smith, musical number by Bill Jones, vocal solo by Miss Ruby Stapley and a piano solo by Miss Grace Pittman. In introducing the speaker for the occasion, Mr. Williams spoke of the very efficient manner in which Mr. Baxter had filled the office as chief executive of the Young People's Conference, stating that the present year found the affairs of that organization in excellent condition.

In his address Mr. Baxter compared the conditions in the time of Christ's life 1900 years ago to those of the present day of Christianity. Speaking of the recent crisis in world affairs, the speaker said he felt that Christ had been just as near during the days of anxiety through which the nations had just passed as He was in the days of Bible times. A Spirit higher than Chamberlain, King George, Hitler or any other of the leaders had prevented a major catastrophe, and guided the various governments to a peaceful solution to the troubles of which they complained. "Christ is just as near now," said the speaker, "as he was in the days of old." All through his address, Mr. Baxter pointed out that as long as one country held possession of more than enough of that in which other countries lacked, there would be dissension and mistrust. The spirit of selfishness must be overcome to the extent that surplus wheat in Canada would feed starving Chinese, and over-supplies of cotton in the United States would be used to provide people suffering from lack of proper protection in countries less fortunate. We must give as Christ gave, in order that world-wide peace and contentment may be known.

Rev. W. J. Scott in a few words spoke of the appreciation of the gathering for the very fine address by Mr. Baxter, and assured him that at any time both he and Mrs. Baxter would be welcome guests of St. Paul's Y.P.U. The meeting closed with the Mizpah Benediction.

Mr. "Bob" Patterson, in his usual happy manner led in community singing which was greatly enjoyed, and Mr. Don Williams staged several contests which resulted in much merriment as each group undertook to excel the other. At the conclusion of the games a very excellent lunch was served by the ladies of the Union and a successful evening was brought to a close by the singing of the National Anthem.

SUFFERS GASH IN LIP

Maurice, young son of Mr. and Mrs. William Montgomery, of the 4th Concession of Rawdon Township, suffered a painful injury to his lip on Tuesday. While playing about the yard the young lad fell on a wire, which pierced his upper lip and inflicted a deep gash. He was brought to the office of Dr. W. H. Pedley, Stirling, where ten stitches were required to close the wound.

Manager Transferred

Mr. H. P. Ellis, manager of the local Branch of the Bank of Montreal for the past three and a half years, has received notice of his transfer to Collingwood, Ont. Since coming to Stirling, Mr. Ellis has been an active member of the Stirling Agricultural Society, and along with Mrs. Ellis has taken a leading part in the activities of the various organizations of St. John's Anglican Church. He was also a member of the Stirling Community Welfare Club, and was one of the prime movers in the establishment of playgrounds for the children in the village.

A talented musician, Mrs. Ellis was a valued member of St. John's Anglican Church Choir, and was heard frequently on the different programmes presented in the village. Both Mr. and Mrs. Ellis have a large circle of friends who will regret their departure from Stirling.

Mr. S. L. Lucas, of Tara, Ont., will succeed Mr. Ellis and it is expected that the transfer will take place within the next ten days.

MAKES OFFICIAL VISIT

Rt. Wor. Bro. Clem H. Ketcheson, District Deputy Grand Master of Prince Edward District, A.F. & A.M., will make his official visit to Stirling Lodge No. 69 tonight (Thursday). It is expected that there will be a large attendance of the brethren to greet the District Deputy.

REGULAR W. I. MEETING HELD

THREE-MONTHS' COURSE BY
H. L. FAIR

The feeling of welcome was well exemplified when on Friday Mrs. T. Spry was hostess to the members and friends of the local Women's Institute. The President, Mrs. W. C. West, called the meeting to order and all sang the Institute Ode, The Maple Leaf, and repeated the Lord's Prayer. Twenty-three members answered the roll call with some ten visitors present; also eight officers were present. Secretary Bronson read the minutes of the previous meeting which were duly signed by the president. Bills and correspondence were discussed and bills were ordered paid by Mrs. Wescott and Mrs. C. Belshaw. On motion of Mrs. Tulloch and Mrs. H. Cooke, the Secretary was authorized to write letters of sympathy and to convalescents whenever necessary. Mrs. C. Holmes, Mrs. H. Cooke and Mrs. M. Ward thanked the members for their expressions of sympathy conveyed to them. Mrs. H. Tulloch, coach for refashioning and Furniture Course, has organized a class to take the course, namely Mrs. H. Donnan, Mrs. D. A. Burklitt, Mrs. L. Rodgers, Mrs. O'Donnell and Mrs. H. Cooke. Mrs. R. A. Patterson was appointed Foreign Correspondent to take the place of Mrs. T. Matheson. Mrs. H. L. Fair and Miss Gena Spry were chosen leader and assistant leader for the "Sleeping Garment" Course for girls. On two items of business no action was taken — giving prizes for Hastings Girls' Training Course, and National Magazine.

Moved by Mrs. D. A. Burklitt and seconded by Mrs. Geo. Lacey that the Treasurer, Mrs. R. Woodbeck, send $5.00 to Mrs. T. Matheson as a small payment for her untiring services while associated with the Stirling W. I. It was moved by Mrs. Geo. Lacey and seconded by Mrs. H. Tulloch that Mrs. W. C. West be the representative at the 2-day Belleville Area Convention at Belleville on Thursday and Friday, October 21st and 22nd. It was moved and seconded that the W. I. hold a dance in the Community hall on Halloween night. Lunch committee will be Mesdames T. Cranston, L. Rodgers, C. Belshaw, W. Jeffrey, J. West; Entertainment Com., the President and Secretary, Mesdames West and Bronson.

The November meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. T. Cranston instead of Mrs. W. Jeffrey.

The Programme Convenor, Mrs. J. J. Wilson, presented the following numbers: Community singing; reading by Mrs. N. Wescott, "Radio from A to Z"; duet, "Church in the Wilderness," by Mrs. N. Heath and Mrs. J. (Continued on Page Eight)

ANNIVERSARY IS CELEBRATED

REV. J. O. WATTS, PH.D., OF QUEEN'S UNIVERSITY, IS GUEST SPEAKER

The congregation of St. Paul's United Church, Stirling, observed its 13th anniversary since Church Union on Sunday last. The observance was recognized by friends from sister churches who shared with St. Paul's in the services of the day, the services of Carmel and of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church being withdrawn for the day, a courtesy which was greatly appreciated. There was a full Church, both morning and evening.

Rev. J. O. Watts, Ph.D., of the faculty of Science, Queen's University, was the guest preacher. Dr. Watts gripped and held the attention of the large congregations both morning and evening, and delivered two sermons marked by their simplicity, sincerity, and human contact. Dr. Watts has the faculty of dealing with the most profound things of human experience in a fashion that makes them easily and clearly understood by all who hear him. Both sermons were of this character. In the morning he spoke on "The Meaning of Worship," pointing out that worship is essentially a recognition of the "worth" or "Value" of life and an attempt to see and appreciate these values in their true relationship to each other. For example "Success" is a word that is very often misunderstood because it is wrongly used of certain people. A man is said to be a successful man if he has gained power over his fellow men, or if he has accumulated money. The means and methods by which he has achieved this are lost sight of. He may have been guilty of many wrongs to his fellows and yet be lauded as a successful man. True success, however, is only achieved where character has been made strong, an unselfish, and noble purpose have found opportunity through personality — where the "will to power" has become secondary to the "will to serve."

In the evening address on "The Place and Function of the Work of the Christian Church" the same emphasis was apparent, applied to the work of the Church. The Church is not an organization with formal times and seasons for worship. It is a Fellowship for the purpose of promoting and strengthening all the basic things of life and conduct — all that makes life a sweeter and better thing

FATAL ACCIDENT IS AVERTED

IN CONTACT WITH 2400-
VOLT LINE

Frank Sprentall, superintendent of the Stirling Hydro-Electric system, escaped instant death about ten o'clock on Tuesday morning, when he accidentally came in contact with a high tension line, carrying 2400 volts. Mr. Sprentall, with his assistant, Gordon W. Bailey, were engaged in stringing wire on the power line on Henry Street, and was working on top of a pole at the corner of Albert and Henry Streets when the accident occurred. While Bailey, who was standing at the foot of the pole, is unable to give any reason for the accident, it is thought that the injured man slipped, and accidentally struck the high tension wire. Showing presence of mind, Mr. Bailey halted R. S. Walker, local insurance agent, who was driving past, and rushed to the power station on Mill Street, where the switch was pulled, summoning Dr. E. A. Carleton. Bailey returned to the scene, and minus his spurs, climbed the pole and secured the unconscious form of the injured man, who was hanging precariously from a cross-arm, only the fact that one foot had become tangled in the wires preventing him from falling to the ground. Ladders were hastily procured and with the assistance of several onlookers, Sprentall was lowered to the ground, where first aid treatment was rendered by the doctor. He was later carried to the residence of Mr. Harry Potter, from where he was rushed to Belleville Hospital, suffering from severe burns to his head, hand and thigh and from shock. Tuesday evening he regained consciousness momentarily and later reports are that he is showing signs of improvement.

Citizens of the village are loud in their praise of Gordon Bailey for his heroic efforts in rescuing Superintendent Sprentall, and all are convinced that it was only through his prompt action that a tragedy was averted.

and the world a safer and a happier place to live in.

The Service of Praise was greatly assisted by a large choir under the leadership of Mr. G. L. Clute, with Mr. William Reynolds taking the solo in the morning anthem and Miss Ruby Stapley as the soloist at the evening service. The Minister, the Reverend W. J. Scott, M.A., S.T.M., presided at both services.

Honoured on Birthday

About twelve members of the Community Friendship Circle of the Women's Missionary Society of St. Paul's United Church gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Thompson, Mill Street, on Tuesday evening, to celebrate with Mrs. Wilson Harlow, the occasion of her eightieth birthday. The evening was spent in community singing and in friendly conversation. The Circle presented Mrs. Harlow with a box of fruit, after which her daughter, Mrs. Thompson served dainty refreshments. On departing each wished Mrs. Harlow many more happy birthdays.

DEFEATED STIRLING

Stirling High School Rugby team fell before the more experienced and heavier Marmora squad in a regular league fixture played on the campus of the local school on Friday afternoon by a score of 16-6. Stirling's touchdown resulted from a spectacular play by Woods, who leaped high in the air to intercept a forward pass and galloped forty yards for five points. The locals' other point resulted from a rouge.

THE COST OF RAISING A CHILD

An attempt is made to estimate the cost of different items involved in raising a child to the age of independence, says an editorial in the Perth Courier. It appears that about $1,550.00 is required, under conditions of 1931, to feed a child until he is 18 years of age, while clothing for that same period costs about $800 and shelter over $2,000. Health, recreational and social costs total about $600 and schooling about $750. The cost of an elementary schooling to the community is $500 per pupil while a high school education requires about $1,050. The cost of supporting a student in the universities of Canada is much higher, $550 being required to pay for one year's schooling. Although only three per cent. of the young people attend university, the high cost of such an education raised the average cost to the community to $690 per average child. When the cost of books and other school equipment as met directly by the parents is added, the total sum required to educate a child is in the neighborhood of $750. The total cost of rearing a child until his eighteenth birthday is then $5,750, of which $4,350 or 77 per cent. is spent on satisfying elementary physical needs, ten per cent. on health, recreational and social cost and 13 per cent. on education. It costs no more to raise six children and give them an average schooling than to raise seven completely illiterate.

THE GERMAN MENACE

Wilson Woodside has an article in Canadian Magazine for October that will prove to be an eye-opener for Canadians who may think that this country has little or no fear of invasion or that it may never fall into other than British hands.

A certain Dr. Colin Ross, a German, has gone over this country from end to end and he has written a book, "Between U.S.A. and the Pole," which has a wide circulation in Germany.

One of the passages from this book is a revelation. Listen to this:

"Canada is one of the few remaining empty spaces on earth; who will take possession of it? You may think this a foolish question and answer that it has already been taken possession of. But we must accustom ourselves to the idea that nothing on earth is certain any more. It is very questionable if nations suffering from unbearable population pressure will forever tolerate that a few millions should hold a whole continent to themselves just because they happened to get there first. Canada goes by the name of a Dominion of the British Empire. This means that its future is just as uncertain as that of the British Empire itself. It is impossible to foresee to what extent we Germans, whether as individuals or a nation, will take part in its development. For the present we can at least do this: keep our eyes open, and remember that today nothing is certain and everything is possible."

Ross goes over the country from end to end, points out where Germany could improve it, where Germany could build fortresses to keep any navy off its shores. All in all he makes out a pretty good case for the German control of our country, and it is perhaps as well that he did this as it will put us now on our guard.

Immigration from Germany to Canada must be discouraged at all costs; Canada must arm to the teeth and be prepared to stand by the Mother Country to the last man, the last dollar. Canada must not pass into the hands of a Germany and its Hitler. Canada must remember that it cannot stand alone against a world power and that if a break-up of the Empire should ever come to pass there is only one recourse for us, to throw in our lot with the United States. If we can.

It is apparent from Ross's book that Germany has ambitions to break up the British Empire and that all talk of peace between these two great countries is but a herring across the trail. Ross says that the future of the British Empire is uncertain. How cocksure those Germans are! From this distance if the fate of any nation is uncertain at the present time it is that of Germany, and its one-lung management, and not of the British Empire that boasts little of its power on sea or land or in the air and yet is probably the most formidable fighting nation the world has ever known.

We are glad that Ross has opened our eyes to Germany's plans. Now that we know what to expect from them, let us be on our guard day and night. Let us assure the Mother Country, our protector and a good one if there ever was one, that we stand fast.

At the same time the Mother Country might help to strengthen Canada by investing more capital in our mines and factories and fisheries and farms and by sending us more of the good stock of the British Isles to populate the millions of acres of this dominion that are the envy of a Dr. Ross and a German nation that has set its eyes on securing this country by hook or crook. — Trenton Courier Advocate.

CURRENT COMMENT

Hallowe'en will be celebrated a week from next Monday and then we can look for winter with its long cold evenings.

Two weeks from Saturday the deer season opens, and local followers of the chase are already planning their annual exodus to the northern part of the county. Deer are reported plentiful and there is bound to be plenty of hunters.

"Unification of Railways opposed by Hon. Dr. Manion," says a headline in a city daily. What the thousands of taxpayers of this country are waiting for is a plan whereby they may be relieved of putting up in the neighbourhood of a million dollars a week to pay for the C.N.R. losses.

Approximately 1230 cars have been stolen so far this year in the city of Toronto, according to figures released last week. In most cases the thieves were assisted by careless motorists leaving their cars unlocked. Owners of cars should make a practice of locking their cars when parked on the streets of larger towns and cities, and thus co-operate with the police.

The last of the Fall Fairs in this district was held on Tuesday at Marmora. As a usual thing, the late fairs do not receive the best the weatherman has to offer, but this year has proved an exception. The weather of the past two weeks has been summerlike, and unusually large crowds have attended the Norwood, Rose-neath and Marmora Fairs.

Results of auction sales in the district indicate an upward trend in the prices of farm stock and implements. There was a long time when farmers received low prices for whatever they had for sale and we are glad that there has been a gradual change for the better, because business men of rural centres are entirely dependent upon the prosperity of the farmers. May the times continue to smile upon the tillers of the soil!

Word from Ottawa that Hon. Chas. Dunning, Minister of Finance, has sufficiently recovered from his illness to again resume his duties will be received with satisfaction by the general public of the Dominion. He suffered a breakdown near the close of the last session of parliament and his return to the most important office in the Cabinet, has been entirely dependent upon his return to health. Irrespective of party prejudices, citizens in every walk of life will join in wishing him continued good health.

After the passing of the amendment to the Criminal Code relative to the operation of slot machines, effective on September 1st last, it was thought that nothing more would be heard of these gambling devices. However, a Toronto daily paper has uncovered several of these machines in operation in Western Ontario towns right under the noses of the provincial and local police, and immediate steps are being taken to clean them up. A stiff penalty to the operators of these machines would discourage others from violating the law in that respect.

The announcement that their Majesties King George VI. and Queen Elizabeth will visit this country early next summer is being enthusiastically received throughout the land. Tentative plans are already being formulated for their entertainment on the North American continent, including a coast to coast tour of the Dominion and a visit to our neighbour to the south. There is no question of their Majesties being popular among their people and Canadians will await with gladness the opportunity to show their loyalty and appreciation to the first reigning monarch to set foot on Canadian soil.

Some startling figures concerning the use of tobacco and alcoholic beverages were revealed in a recent editorial in the Ottawa Journal. It says in part: "What a strange medley of contrasts and contradictions is human behaviour! Most of us have been talking about 'hard times', complaining. Yet comes the Dominion Bureau of Statistics to tell that last year, 1937, Canadian liquor stores took in the tidy sum of $109,000,000 — or about $10 for every man, woman and child in the country. We smoked a lot, too. We smoked, in fact, about 6,000 million cigarettes, or about $60,000,000 worth, and topped that off with 123 million cigars. In between, just for fun and relaxation (we are again quoting the Statistics Bureau), we wagered $21,000,000 at our various race tracks."

THE USEFUL PERSON

(Trenton Courier-Advocate)

The person who proves useful to a community may be maligned by the Never-Attempters, but that man does not hurt him any. Even a cur has the privilege to bark at the moon that provides him with the light to show him what he is barking at.

THE TRUTH IS MIGHTY

(Almonte Gazette)

"Twisting the Lion's Tail," used to be an expression indicating that some nation in this little world of ours was picking on Old England. This expression has now been discarded because the British Lion no longer has a tail. That appendage has been removed from the British Lion's rump, segment, as follows: by Japan in Manchuria; by Mussolini in Ethiopia; by Hitler in the Saar; by Hitler in Austria; by Mexico over the oil rights of the Imperial companies; by Hitler in Czechoslovakia, and soon by Hitler demanding half the blooming world and getting it too — if old Chamberlain stays where he is. And the strange thing about it all is that the Lion tries to make the best of it by pretending he doesn't miss his tail. Oh, shades of Lord Palmerston, Lord Chatham, William Pitt and that man Oliver Cromwell who made the name of England respected throughout the world!

HOUSE SHORTAGE EXPLAINED

(Durham Chronicle)

We notice where there is a housing shortage in other towns, as in Durham. There is not much incentive at present to erect residences. If you own one the tax rate is higher than you can rent it for; if you rent it the chances are you may have trouble to collect, and if you try to sell you will have to accept less than it is worth, take a mortgage and have a hard time getting that paid. No wonder there are house shortages. Under these conditions, there are few who care to build.

UP TO THE VOTER

(Deseronto Post)

The Deseronto Voters' List will be in the hands of Clerk M. C. Maher this week. While this is an uninteresting statement in itself, it conveys a meaning to all ratepayers which should arouse their interest to a greater degree than it usually does. If everyone entitled to a vote would keep in mind that it is their manifest duty to look over the voters' list of the municipality in which they reside at least once a year there would not be that heart-burning and trouble that crops up every so often when some kind of an election is held and some person entitled to a vote finds that his name has for some reason been left off the list. In most cases it has been due to carelessness, of a misunderstanding, but it causes trouble all the same. In the final analysis, it is not the fault of anyone else but the voter himself, who has neglected to see that he was on the list. The Municipal Act provides for a period of twenty days after the date of official posting, to permit corrections to be made. Every ratepayer and every eligible voter for either municipal or legislative elections should see that their name is correctly listed.

ROYALTY AND CANADA'S NEIGHBOUR

(Cobourg World)

It is considered unlikely that the King and Queen will be able to go to the United States when they come to Canada, popular as such a visit would undoubtedly be. A further picturesque suggestion has been made which should have the careful consideration of His Majesty's advisers.

This idea is that King George and President Roosevelt might meet for a handshake somewhere on the international border. We feel sure that the King and the President would be equally glad to emphasize by such a symbolic handshake the firm friendship between Canada and the United States.

The finest setting for such a meeting would be one of the great bridges that join the two friendly countries. There is a plentiful choice, increased by two this year, to the great advantage of both nations. It would be hard to find a better place than the arch of simple beauty that bears the mark of the unfortified boundary in the chain of spans that make up the Thousand Islands Bridge.

If their Majesties' plans do not permit a visit to Washington, we hope that the President of the United States will receive and accept an invitation to shake hands with them on the border.

CHEESE SLOGAN CONTEST IS ANNOUNCED

First prize award is $10.00, with $5.00 as Second prize. Contest will close November 15th.

SCHOOLS OPEN AT TWEED

After a ten-day holiday, the public school children of Tweed, again returned to their regular classes. Dr. M. G. Dales, medical health officer opened the schools on Monday morning.

The schools were closed on October 5 when two cases of scarlet fever were reported. Later the children were barred from attending theatres, churches, Sunday schools or any public gathering. During the ten days nearly 100 children were given the Dick test, with sixty-five being inoculated against the disease. All the necessary precautions were taken to prevent a serious epidemic, according to Dr. Dales. Only six cases were reported.

With no new cases being reported for over a week, the town again took on a normal atmosphere. Storekeep-

BRIDE-TO-BE HONOURED

In honour of Miss Donna Smith, bride-to-be, a delightful shower was held at the home of Miss Doris Hess, Sidney Township, last Friday evening. Miss Smith was presented with a handsome silver tea set by twenty girl friends and an address read by Miss Edith Hagerman.

"We who are here tonight, representing many others, have come to express our regret at severing the ties of happy social relationships which we all enjoyed with you. The stream of time flows swiftly on, bringing many changes, some pleasant, some sad, and yet you're going to leave a gap which will be hard to fill. As Carrie Jacobs Bond expresses it in her poem:

Ain't it funny that some folks you can't miss,
Ain't it funny some folks you miss a pile,

And the folks that you can't miss you see lots,
And the other folks — once in a while.

Now on this occasion
We bring you this day,
A few little gifts,
Very dainty and gay.
Just accept these gifts
As a slight token we pray
Of the love and esteem
We shall bear you away.

Please kindly unwrap
As we all stand by
And watch with delight
As each one you untie.

Now in your future years
As you and Sheldon drink tea,
Use this gift and remember us
Wherever you be.

The evening was spent in cards, and at eleven a delicious lunch was served and a pleasant evening drawn to a close. The guests departed wishing Miss Smith very much happiness.

COVERING THE WORLD OF SPORT

The aged and hoary question of which football code, American or Canadian, provides the more interesting spectacle from a spectator point of view, has cropped up again for its annual session. George M. Hunter, sports editor of the Port Huron (Mich.) Times-Herald, crossed the line to Sarnia last fall, witnessed a Sarnia Imperials-Toronto Balmy Beach senior O.R.F.U. battle, and immediately became a convert to the Canadian brand of the great fall pastime. In a special article written for the Sarnia Canadian Observer's annual football edition, Hunter says:

"I wish every college coach, every rule-maker and every sports writer in this country could see a few of the games played by the senior teams in the Dominion. They would at once cry for a change in the rules and tactics of the game on this side, so that they could see the colour, the dash, the gamble of the Canadian game. The difference between the two games is just enough so that the pep and drama that is so often lacking in our brand of the sport is supplied in abundant measure to Canadian fans. College football in the United States is just about the most over-rated sport in existence. Most of the crowds who pack the big stadia every fall, go to see the colour and display of the crowd. The rest go to see dramatic and thrilling football which is only uncorked once or twice a season. Most of the time they are disappointed, because the games tactically are very dull. Why? Because in the college game, the possession of the ball is so valuable that field generals do not dare take any risks. They try a couple of line plays, they punt out of danger (usually out of bounds, so the punts can't be run back) and then settle down to a tight defense. Quarterbacks don't dare call fancy plays in their own territory, for they might lose the ball. One touchdown decides a game between two fairly well-matched teams.

"With teams composed of high-class players, somewhere about the equal of college players in the States, we see an entirely different brand of football, once we settle down for an O.R.F.U. or Big Four contest, or, better still, a play-off for the Dominion title. We see triple passes, quick tosses improvised during a running play, long and short forward passes, quick kicks, lateral tosses from one side to the other and with all this aerial bombardment, we see a remarkable lack of fumbling. How those boys can toss that pigskin around! I have seen Big Ten football since I was a kid, I hate to admit how many years back. Except during the World War I have seen every Michigan team in four different decades. I saw Heston, I saw Eckersall, I saw the Craig, I saw Germany Schultz, I saw George Glipp, I saw Friedman and Osterpaan, I saw them all. But I would just as soon see a Canadian rugby contest as any of them. And that is a mighty broad statement, as you Canadians who are also college football fans will realize," Hunter concludes.

Hunter is but one of several U. S. sport writers who are agitating in their country for addition of the rouge, three downs for yards, and other features of the Canuck game. If they are successful, it will not be the first time this country has contributed to the American code, for the lateral pass was in use here for years before the college squads across the line embraced it. We recall the first year they tried it, back just before the war, Harvard secretly imported five Hamilton Tigers backfielders to teach their men how to sling the oval in the lateral style. The Harvardites caught on so quickly that they handed Notre Dame a terrific trouncing, despite the fact that the Irish were heavy favourites. Yale was another club that brought in Canadians to teach them the lateral pass around that time.

Of course, we borrowed the forward pass from the Americans; and in our opinion if there was a little more reciprocity in football rules, the fans on both sides of the line in a few years would see a more interesting, thrilling and dramatic spectacle.

SPORTS ODDITY — In a game at Caledonia in the hectic series between that club and Aylmer in the O.B.A. "C" final round, a blue drive ignited a bunch of matches in his pocket and caused some damage to his clothing. What one would call a "scorching" hit!

Canadians seem to be quite prominent in the wrestling business in England, as well as supplying considerable talent to Old Country boxing rings, and the huge majority of players in the English National Hockey League. Last week we ran into Alf Spittles, who was well known throughout Ontario as an amateur grappler a few years back. Alf has just returned from London, where he wrestled professionally under the name of Al Hamilton. He estimates that there are at least 75 Canadians wrestling in the Old Land, where the chief promoter conducts three shows a week and sometimes four. Most of the Canuck grunt-and-growl artists have established headquarters at Brickton, with the result, Alf says, that this place is known as "Little Canada." Earl McCready, of Edmonton, former Dominion heavyweight champ, is now a promoter in London.

Here's what the Weekly Sporting Review of London has to say about Spittles' departure: "Wrestling fans will be sorry to hear that Al Hamilton has left for his home town, Hamilton, Canada. Al was the very first Canadian wrestler to appear in this country. He has wrestled almost non-stop for six years in England, and has appeared in practically every wrestling hall in London and the provinces. 'The popularity of Al was established because he never gave a bad show. Rough or clean, Al was always ready. Nothing pleased him better than to face up to an opponent who compelled him to produce the most skillful elements of the game, yet he loved a 'bundle' and his performances, altogether, were consistently excellent."

Under the British rules, main-bouters wrestle six rounds of ten minutes each, with a rest period of one minute between each round.

Questions Dept. — How old is the game of ice hockey?

Odds 'n Ends — Billy Wilson, member of the St. Catharines Athletics lacrosse squad that recently defeated the New Westminster (B.C.) Adanacs three straight games for the Mann Cup, holds an unique record. He has played on three different Dominion championship clubs in three different towns — Hamilton Tigers, Orillia Terriers, New Westminster Salmonbellies, and now the St. Catharines crew. With the National Hockey League squads all in training camps, winter must be just around the well-known corner. Break-up of the Montreal Maroons has caused a glut on the player market, especially with so many promising prospects coming up. The champion Chicago Black Hawks are the only outfit with less than 40 players in training. Seems like hockey has become big business, and the laugh is that the seven clubs will play a strenuous season of 48 games to eliminate but one team from the Stanley Cup playdowns. Jerry Connell, Orillia Terriers' lacrosse star who suffered a broken leg in the Terriers' final game, had signed a pro hockey contract with Springfield Indians. A tough break for the giant young defenceman, whose home is Hespler. He starred for Port Colborne Sailors in the Senior O.H.A. last year.

A Year Ago in Sport — On October 20th, 1937, Oscar Vitt, who had just led a sensational Newark Club to a little world series title, signed as manager of Cleveland Indians of the American League.

Answers Dept. — Ice hockey is less than 50 years old. It was originated at McGill University, Montreal, in 1879. The following year the Victoria club of Montreal, was organized, and a Quebec team, and the three squads played the first hockey schedule in history. The O.H.A. came into being in 1890, and the original N.H.L. (professional) in 1908.

NEWS OF INTEREST FOR BUSY FARMERS

Current Crop Report
Silo-filling and harvesting of mangels have been under way in many districts. Huron County reports pastures excellent for this time of year. Fall plowing is the order of the day in most parts of the province. Harvesting of the seed crop in Haldimand is continuing with all possible speed. Sugar beet and celery harvests have been under way in Lambton. Lincoln County reports that every farmer has more than enough ensilage to fill his silo, the first time in many years that this has been the case. Potato harvesting is general in Middlesex, with yields varying from 100 to 300 bushels per acre and quality good. Hastings reports that livestock are in good shape there and milk flow is holding up well for the time of year. Northumberland makes a similar report. Victoria states that the yield of grain on most farms is the best in a few years. Red Clover is of a high quality in Grenville, while in Lennox and Addington poultry are going to market earlier than usual, with prices slightly above last year.

Increased prize money for classes of early oats and seed corn has been approved by the Directors of the Guelph Winter Fair. This is in keeping with their desire to give greater recognition to the products of the field as well as to livestock, announces E. K. Hampson, Vice-President of the Fair and Chairman of the Seed Department. It is also in recognition of the loyalty and interest of the large number of seed producers who support the Show from year to year, Mr. Hampson states.

The Guelph Winter Fair is known throughout Ontario as the "Farmers' Show". Here gather scores of the best farmers of the Province to meet their neighbours and get the newest information from the Ontario Agricultural College officials, who are always in attendance.

This year the O.A.C. will have a large display showing the results of pasture and feeding experiments, as well as a description of the approved varieties of potatoes, grains and other farm crops.

In co-operation with the Corn Growers' Association, the Federal Government through W.J.W. Lennox, will place some "corn facts" before the grower and feeder of Ontario corn. Generally speaking, Ontario crops have been above the average and prospects are good for the largest seed show in the history of the Guelph Show.

Dates for this year's fair are November 29, 30 and December 1st.

Preparing Winter Quarters for Poultry

In common practice on the average Canadian farm, late September or the month of October is the time for the new crop of pullets to be housed in preparation for their first year's production.

Before the birds are taken off range however, it is necessary, in the interest of the comfort and general health of the birds as well as the convenience of the operator, to give the poultry premises a thorough and systematic overhauling.

A start should be made with the elimination of all older stock that is not to be carried over the winter. If the farmer depends on the purchase of day-old chicks for flock-renewal, this may possibly mean the disposal of all stock in the plant. If breeders are to be retained, they should be separated from the laying stock if sufficient space is available.

Having removed surplus stock, attention should be centred on the premises. If portable panel fencing is used, the hurdles may be removed and stored for the winter. Runways may be lined and ploughed. If convenient, remove all loose fittings such as nests, drop-boards, from the house and expose them to the bright sun for several days. They should first, of course, be cleaned of all dust and litter. Scrape and sweep floors, and sweep walls and ceilings. After cleaning is completed, apply a good lime wash to every part of the interior of the house. Disinfectants may be added to the wash if considered advisable.

Incidentally, a spray pump is the most satisfactory method of whitewashing as it is then possible to drive the material into all cracks and seams. Apply a thorough coat of whitewash to the fittings, nests, roosts, etc., before they are returned to place.

Stop any drafts, such as open seams or knot-holes, etc., and replace broken window glass and any torn cotton in the ventilating sashes.

Put in a good supply of fresh, clean litter, and your house is ready for the birds whenever they are brought in from range.

High or Low Grade Honey

Honey, to the chemist, is essentially a highly concentrated sugar solution. To the consumer honey is a delicious food direct from nature. It contains, besides the highly nutritive sugars, many other elements essential to the human body.

Since most honey is marketed in the extracted form, unchanged in composition, it is of many different shades of colour and has a great variety of flavours. Honey also varies in moisture content depending, to a certain extent, on the weather conditions during the nectar gathering period. The length of time the honey is allowed to remain on the hive before extracting has also a bearing on the density, therefore, the supers should not be removed for extracting until the combs are at least three-quarters capped. During extracting, care should be taken to avoid the honey becoming spoiled in any way.

This may happen by the absorption of moisture from the air, so that the drier the honey house the better. Steam should not be allowed to escape into the air of the extracting room and the windows should be kept closed during damp or rainy weather. Even capped or comb honey stored in a damp place will absorb moisture from the air.

Honey should be heated only sufficiently to facilitate straining. If, indeed, heating is necessary. The volatile oils which are present in infinitely small quantities are driven off by heat. It is these oils which give honey its fine aroma and flavour. Therefore, excessive heat should be avoided.

The texture of granulated honey depends largely on its treatment while in the liquid state. Granulation is retarded by heating and the quicker the granulation the more uniformly smooth the final product. Therefore, after extracting honey should be stored in a cool, dry place.

Cleanliness in handling honey cannot be emphasized too much. Honey rapidly deteriorates under careless handling, and while the grading regu-

WEST HUNTINGDON

The recent Indian Summer has been much appreciated by the citizens here. The farmers have gathered in the last of the harvest ere the winter's storms begin.

Endeavourers' Class Meets

Through the kindness of Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Tummson, of Belleville, the Endeavourers' Class enjoyed one of the best meetings held in some time. Mr. and Mrs. Tummson were valued members of this group when they resided here, and it was their wish that the Class gather at their home in Belleville for the October Social evening. Mr. Frank Hammond presided over this interesting and helpful programme following the worship period, which consisted of singing of an appropriate hymn and prayer. Mr. Clayton Wright read a portion of Scripture. The roll call was given by twenty members and was answered by giving something to be thankful for. Mr. Clayton Tummson gave a solo. Rev. W. R. Tristram gave the special address on Thanksgiving. Mr. Elmer Post gave a reading on "Bones of the Church." Miss Eileen Tummson favoured the gathering with two solos. Mr. Harold Ashley gave a reading. Meeting closed with the hymn "What a Friend we have in Jesus" and the Benediction. Mrs. Tummson conducted a musical contest and also served a delightful lunch. A vote of appreciation was extended to Mr. and Mrs. Tummson and Eileen for this opportunity of assembling with them in their home and enjoying the fine fellowship of the outstanding group.

Young People's Meeting

The Young People of the United Church met at the parsonage on Friday evening to arrange plans for programs for the coming year. Rev. Tristram was chairman of the evening's program which consisted of an address by the chairman on "Music in the Church." The Misses Irene and Those who guide the activities of the Union are: President, Mr. Keith Bray; Vice-President, Miss Hilda Moorcroft; Sec-Treas., Miss Georgia Pitman; Convenors of the Departments: James Elliott, Alvin Carr, Margaret Elliott, Kathleen Moorcroft. The members will be divided into two groups with Miss Dorothy Tristram and Mr. Harold Elliott as chosen Captains.

Sunshine Mission Band

The Sunshine Mission Band of St. Andrew's Church held a meeting at Miss Jean Thompson's home on Saturday afternoon. The singing of Jesus Loves Me and prayer and scripture lesson by Miss Joyce Wallace, concluded the worship service. In the business period it was decided to hold the meeting at Jean Haggerty's home. Mrs. John Wallace had charge of the Scrapbook and Miss Jean Thompson gave a talk on "The Life of David Livingston." Miss Jean Haggerty gave a reading. Mount Pleasant Women's Missionary Society held their October meeting at the Parsonage with an attendance of twelve members and three visitors. The service opened with quiet music played by Mrs. Ross Hoard and the call to worship "His Gift or Mine", with the President, Mrs. Percy MacMullen, in the chair. All joined in a Thanksgiving hymn and Mrs. J. E. Beckel offered prayer. Roll Call was answered with the keyword Thanksgiving. The Treasurer, Mrs. Arthur Phillips, has remitted to date $116.86, and the allocation is $60.00. Mrs. George Weaver read the minutes and in the business period several items were discussed and passed. Mrs. Baldwin Reid took charge of the Devotional period, using suitable Bible passages on the theme of Thanksgiving, and she also gave a splendid paper on the subject. Miss Eileen MacMullen gave a report of the recent Sectional Rally held at West Huntingdon and was tendered a vote of thanks. Mrs. H. Higgs sang "Precious Music of God's Word", with guitar accompaniment. Mrs. Allan Bailey gave a Stewardship paper dealing with "The Right of Possession." Mrs. Frank Jeffs contributed an appropriate reading "In the Shadow of the Cross." The President outlined the last two chapters of the Study, "A new Church faces a new World" and this closes the book and the new Study Book will be commenced in November. Mrs. Arthur Phillips read a story telling of the "Family in the Mission House." The offering amounting to nearly five dollars was dedicated to God's cause and the service closed.

For three years (1931, 1932, 1933) in the worst of the depression, the Canadian National System failed by an average of more than $4,000,000 per year to contribute anything at all to payment of interest on the capital invested in the system, according to the Canada Year Book.

Mr. and Mrs. Will Heath Honoured One of the largest crowds ever seen in Mount Pleasant Hall gathered on Tuesday evening to honour Mr. and Mrs. Will Heath, nee Frances McKeown. Over two hundred and eighty friends and relatives from various points were present for this auspicious occasion. The bride and groom were given seats of honour in the hall bridal suite and Rev. J. E. Beckel was master of ceremonies. He expressed the good wishes of the gathering to the young people and welcomed them to the Bethel appointment; also paid tribute to another bridal couple, Mr. and Mrs. Don Heath, who were in the audience. On behalf of the Trustees Board of the Church, Rev. Mr. Beckel presented Frances with a letter of appreciation for her services as pianist for the past three years, and enclosed with the letter was a cheque.

An interesting program was then staged. Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Higgs and Mr. Burton Calvert delighted the audience with several selections on Jew's harp, guitar and violin. Miss Evelyn Barnum recited a humorous poem, Miss Ruth Rose, and Lois Weaver sang a duet with Mrs. Kenneth Weaver as accompanist. Miss Marion Rose gave a reading "In the Usual Way." Miss Lois McAdam contributed a solo, with Miss Phyllis David as accompanist. Master Don Spencer rendered a guitar solo. Mrs. Percy MacMullen gave a humorous reading about "Wives". Mr. John Coggins sang a selection giving a humorous history of the bride and groom with Mrs. Ross Hoard as pianist. Miss Evelyn Gibson and Mr. Garland Irwin sang two selections with guitar accompaniment, one being "The Eastbound Train." Mrs. Cyrus Summers gave some useful advice to the girls in the audience who were unmarried. Miss Esma Cole read an address of appreciation to the young couple.

Frances and Bill both suitably replied, thanking their friends for the kindness shown to them, and inviting all to visit them in their new home. The young couple, assisted by Misses Marjorie Hagerman and Esma Cole spent the next half hour unwrapping the vast array of gifts. The parcels revealed an assortment of bedspreads, towels, cushions, linen, curtains, pictures, china, glass, electric appliances, kitchen accessories and many other articles suitable for the new home. At the close Frances again extended thanks for the gifts and all joined in singing "For they are jolly good fellows". An appetizing lunch was served by the young folks and all enjoyed a social time together.

The following is the address:
Mount Pleasant, Ontario,
October 18th, 1938

Dear Frances and Bill,—
It is with much pleasure that we, your friends and neighbours, have gathered here tonight to congratulate you on your recent marriage and wish you much happiness and success in your wedded life.

Marriage brings many pleasures. It also brings greater opportunities and responsibilities. We feel sure that you will assume these with courage. It has been said that life is what we make it. We know that yours will be one of joy and co-operation.

In all our church and community work Frances, you have given your time and talents graciously and willingly. In the Sunday School, Young People's League, Choir, W.M.S. and Mission Band your service will be greatly missed. We appreciate much your great patience and sacrifice as pianist of the church. We are sorry to lose you from our neighborhood, and we are glad that you will not be far away. However, what is our loss will be another's gain.

To you Bill, we offer our hearty congratulations in so wise a choice of a partner for life. We know that Frances, with her quiet manner will be your help in the dark days as well as the bright ones which are in the future. As a slight sign of our esteem and good wishes we ask you to accept these gifts. As you use them may they remind you of your many friends at Mount Pleasant.

May success and happiness crown all your best efforts and God's richest blessings ever follow you through the journey of life.

Signed on behalf of your Mount Pleasant friends: Bert Jeffs, Anna Sharp, Esma Cole, Herbert Smith, John Coggins.

Rev. Canon W. G. Swayne attended the Ministerial Association which was held in Stirling on Monday of this week.

Children's Day was observed at St. Mark's Church on Sunday last, both at the Sunday School hour, in the morning and at the evening service at 7.30 p.m. Canon Swayne gave an interesting talk to the Sunday School and delivered an impressive sermon at the evening service. There was a splendid attendance at both.

At a meeting of the Bonarlaw Railway Club last week, strong opinions were expressed regarding the statement of Mayor Bone of Belleville in a speech in Toronto regarding the wages of Railway Employees. It was felt that Mayor Bone has not studied the matter or else has been badly misinformed. He has also forgotten it was stated, that increased wages to railway men in Belleville and vicinity would mean more pinches would be made in his city. Why then, advocate smaller wages?

BEAUTY PROBLEMS

Barbara Lynn

Eminent Beauty Authority and Adviser, who writes weekly articles on Beauty Problems for many Canadian Newspapers.

BUST DEVELOPMENT

Rounded loveliness is Fashion's aim today — and the ardent desire of every girl and woman to attain. We simply must have shapely, well-rounded curves to be fashionable to be smart today. Gone are the boyish lines so popular some years ago! And who will say that the change is not an improvement?

Nothing so enhances sheer dainty femininity as shapely curves. And that this is realized by most women is strikingly evidenced by the number of letters I receive asking for help in Bust Development.

There is probably no other part of the anatomy that is so easily developed in early youth. As we grow older, though, proper development becomes more and more difficult, but still not unattainable.

There are two methods of securing bust development. Internal medication (taking tablets that have a stimulating effect on the glands of the breasts) and massage combined with setting-up exercises. Personally, I believe the ideal treatment is a combination of these, modified perhaps to suit individual circumstances. Internal medication has a tendency to cause a general fattening effect on the entire body, which is very advantageous where a person is underweight and inclined to be thin. When, however, it is desired simply to develop the bust without putting on weight generally, a treatment of massage, with a cream containing special ingredients, is to be preferred, with a judicious regimen of exercise.

It cannot be too strongly emphasized that bust developing needs to be carried on very carefully and delicately. Drastic treatment must be avoided.

I have prepared a special leaflet which deals far more exhaustively with Bust Development than is possible in a newspaper article. You may obtain a copy and send a 3c stamp for each one required: How to Slim; Reducing in Spots; Underweight; Superfluous Hair; The Face Beauty; Hand Beauty; Your Hair.

At the same time, do not hesitate to ask about your own beauty worries. I shall be glad to advise you personally and without publicity.

Please mention the name of this paper, and address your letter to: Barbara Lynn, P.O. Box 75, Station B, Montreal, Quebec.

These verbal and written pronouncements of unity of thought and

British Commonwealth of Nations were followed up by some important happenings. The American Government established a very powerful North Atlantic squadron to the seaboard of both Canada and the United States, and which minimal and aviation experts interpreted as a strong preparation to resist the British fleet in the event of future warfare. Not only has the United States added 55 war ships, including dreadnaughts, battle-cruisers, destroyers and aircraft carriers, they have authorized an increase in the number of these vessels.

PERTH EDITOR DIES, AGED 93

Toronto — Editor and publisher of the Perth Courier before he retired in 1901, James Murray Walker died in Toronto in his 94th year.

Until a week ago, when he suffered a stroke, Mr. Walker retained a keen interest in newspapers and periodicals. Last week was the first time he missed reading the Perth Courier a paper which had been in the Walker family for 69 years.

A native of Napanee, Mr. Walker gained his early experience in journalism with the Eastern Ontario, a weekly paper. He became editor and publisher of the Perth paper when his brother, George L. Walker, then proprietor of the Courier, died. For a number of years he was assisted by another brother, the late W. T. Walker, in managing the weekly. On the occasion of his retirement, Mr. Walker sold the Perth Courier to his nephew, W. W. Walker, present editor and publisher.

Following his retirement he made frequent trips abroad and wrote many articles of his travels. Nine years ago he started on a trip to Russia, but was compelled to return to Canada when he took ill en route. He had resided in Gananoque and Kingston before coming here six years ago to live with his niece, Mrs. H. J. Luck, 528 Briar Hill avenue. He was a Liberal in politics and was a member of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church;
Perth. Interment will be in Riverside Cemetery, Napanee, Saturday.

PARLIAMENT MAY MEET BEFORE CHRISTMAS

The "possibility" that the next session of parliament will begin early — before Christmas — was indicated by Hon. Ernest Lapointe, acting Prime Minister. He said there would be no
"fall" session, but "it is possible the session may start some time before Christmas."

The matter will be decided after the return of the Prime Minister. If the session is started early, the particular purpose would be to have the deliberations concluded in advance to the coming of the King and Queen, for which event very extensive preparations will need to be made.

Although, normally, the session would not be called for ratification of the projected trade agreements, no doubt they would be one of the first items of business taken up after the customary formal debates at the opening of the session. By the "possibility of meeting before Christmas," it is presumed the acting Premier had in view the assembly of parliament early in December.

MARMORA "TRAFFIC COP" OWNS MANY-TOED CAT

When Highway Traffic Officer Jack Hatch, of Marmora, is not on his dusty bike, fulfilling his official duties, he takes time out to play with "Ginger" a handsome cat, that is the pride of the Hatch home. "Ginger" boasts twenty-five toes, eighteen of which are evenly divided between her two front feet and one hind one, while the other foot boasts seven digits.
Her maternal ancestor proudly boasted twenty-four toes, while four brothers and sisters had numbers of digits that ranged between twenty and twenty-five.

WHAT AN AUTOMOBILE INCLUDES

Have you ever thought of what you are getting when you buy one of the new, shiny automobiles on display in your automobile dealer's show-rooms?
The Brockville Recorder & Times brought forth some interesting data on the question in a recent editorial.
It says:

"When the Smiths go to their dealer and buy a new automobile, they are acquiring the product of innumerable industries.

If it is one of the lower priced automobiles of popular make, it contains among its many components the following basic items in approximately these portions:

A ton and a third of steel.
Thirty-three pounds of copper and brass.
Two pounds of tin.
Twenty-seven pounds of lead.
One hundred and forty-four pounds of cast pig iron.
One hundred and ten pounds of rubber.
One-tenth of a bale of cotton.
Thirteen square yards of upholstery fabric.
Thirty-seven pounds of paper and fibre board.
Eighteen square feet of glass.
In addition the Smiths get the use of lumber, grease, electric power, chemical and numerous other supply materials employed in production.
To these physical items must be added the less tangible but most expensive items: use of millions of dollars worth of precision machinery, many hours of labour at an average of 95 cents an hour, and a share of millions of dollars' worth of scientific and engineering research.
By the time it is bought some part of the purchase price of the car already has found its way to virtually every section of the country and some to the far corners of the world from which several of the rare ingredients must be collected."

Synopsis

Jocelyn Harlowe, raised in a French convent, at the age of eighteen joins her mother, Marcella, in New York. Worried about her safety, because she is unfamiliar with the modern world and has developed into a beautiful woman, her mother's first wish is to get her safely married. Attending her first ball, Jocelyn meets Felix Kent, rich, handsome and nineteen years older than herself. Encouraged by her mother, she and Felix quickly become engaged. Alone in her apartment one night, a cripple, Nick Sandal, enters by the fire-escape, confides in her that he is her father and that her real name is Lynda Sandal. He gives her his address, inquires about her coming marriage and disappears as mysteriously as he had come. She confides in her mother that she does not want to get married so soon, but her mother tells her it is for the best just as Felix comes in and takes her in his arms.

"Crying, loveliest?"

Jocelyn answered in a hard voice, "No."

"Are you angry about something?"

"Yes."

"Have I done anything to hurt you, dear? If so, it was quite unintentional."

"You haven't done anything. It's what you are."

"Jocelyn! Do you realize what you are saying? That's pretty hard."

"I know it is. I feel hard. And I can't believe that you love me."

"But, dearest."

"If you did, if I felt that you did, I would be happier."

"Jocelyn," he began in anger but promptly controlled himself, assuming a tone of authority. "You're just a child and you are indulging yourself in a mood. Come on. Get ready to go out. You need a change of scene and some diversion. I'll take you down to my office . . . I have to go there . . . and to lunch somewhere amusing afterward. A theatre maybe. That will give you a break, won't it? Something new to think about."

"Oh, Felix, will you? I'd love to see your office. I've never been inside an American office. Will you show me everything? Will you explain everything?"

The office occupied the third floor of a tall narrow building. Its windows faced a one end the street, at the other a narrow alleyway. Jocelyn's eyes, healed from tears as quickly as a child's, were bright with curiosity and with excitement. The observant clerks and stenographers in the outer office made her flush. In Kent's inner sanctuary, the office that looked out on the alleyway, she was introduced to Miss Rebecca Deal, a little ruddy sturdy woman with bright eyes, glasses and a wide mouth.

When Felix left to interview some one in the outer office, she sat down in his revolving chair before his great neat handsome desk and, looking at Miss Deal with all her eager eyes, began to question her.

"You work here with him every day?"

"Half the time he's off, Miss Harlowe, in Chicago or the Southwest. He's interested, as of course you know, in all the mines."

"Are they the crosses on the map here against the wall?"

"Yes. He has so many irons in the fire, only I always say they oughtn't to be called 'irons' but 'goldens' for the value of them . . . though they don't show any sign of melting. There never was a luckier or smarter man than your fiancé, Miss Harlowe."

"It seems so queer to me," said Jocelyn with her slow wistful smile, "that all this side of his life just means nothing to me. How much better you know him than I do!"

Rebecca laughed and blushed. "Oh, now, you've got no call to say that, I'm sure. You, his best girl and everything! But, in a manner of speaking, yes. I'm in his confidence. He calls me his second safe. The first one's over yonder."

Jocelyn looked at the great shining box, sealed against her as closely as the real mind of its owner.

"What's in it, Miss Deal?"

"His most important papers. Contracts. Correspondence. Heaven knows what all!"

"And you know all about them?"

"Why, no, Miss Harlowe, I can't say I do. But sometimes I get access to them. Not that I know the combination. Mr. Kent's the only one who knows that."

"You will think I'm a perfect idiot but, you know."

"I'm like Pandora, Miss Deal," Jocelyn admitted. "I'd like to know how to open it. Do you suppose he'd tell me?"

Miss Deal shrugged. Behind the glasses her eyes were half pitying and half contemptuous.

"You think I haven't much chance, don't you?" asked Jocelyn shrewdly.

Miss Deal covered her confusion at the pretty fool's surprising perspicacity, in a clicking slide of compliment and cordiality.

Then Felix entered and the girl came toward him, speaking earnestly. A new Jocelyn seemed to meet him at every turn he made.

"Felix, can't I learn how to do these things for you? I mean, if Miss Deal could teach me, I'd love to work with you, to understand . . ."

"Out to steal Miss Beck's job already, are you? Bless you, darling, you're a sweet child. Isn't she a sweet child, Miss Beck?"

Miss Beck made a dry sound which passed for an assent.

"I would really like to know about your business, Felix."

"You shall know whatever you want to know, sweetheart." He winked back at Miss Beck restoring her good humour and her sense of superiority. "Just you ask questions. Miss Beck will answer them."

"And both of you know quite well that I'm ignorant even to know . . . what questions." She was close to tears.

Felix became at once serious, respectful and concerned. Miss Deal, with a twisted mouth of irony, returned to her typewriter.

In the limousine, on their way to lunch, Felix spoke tenderly:

"You mustn't be hurt at my teasing you, Jocelyn. I do want you to be in my confidence, but I never thought you'd be interested in this sort of thing."

"But this sort of thing is just part of all I must know, Felix. I have been so put away and shut up . . . like one of these unlucky princesses in towers. Do you think I could take a business course, perhaps, after we are married?"

"You may take any course you like beloved. But you mustn't hate your beautiful innocence. It is just because you are so exquisitely different that I love you."

And it was that very afternoon when they quarrelled for the first time seriously.

Jocelyn was playing for him. He would often ask her to, for although his interest in music and his understanding of it were negligible it obligated the necessity for conversation. Yet Jocelyn wanted to talk.

She played, therefore, rebelliously and chose, snapping off in the middle of his favourite "piece" (the ballet from Sylvia) that melody of her own composition, the nursery rhyme set to the intervals of terror.

She sang and her face changed. "Quand le petit bossu, ma foi! Vient se placer derrière moi!"

"Tell me what it means," commanded Felix, striding toward her, his mouth set. For there was a look in the girl's face that woke the tyrant in him.

"This is my secret," sang Jocelyn in her queer light tone. "It is like the combination of your safe that holds your papers and your contracts and your correspondence and your ancient love-letters."

"I must have my secrets. Mother has hers. And you have yours. I've tried to win them from you. But, no, you will keep them to yourselves. And now you can't spare mine out of me by placing yourself there behind me, ma foi! Because you are a great, tall straight man as simple as a perpendicular line . . . or a wooden post."

"Stop taunting me, you little devil." He pulled back her head and kissed her on the mouth and she, springing up, struck at him with a violence that sent him staggering.

"Jocelyn!"

"I told you to be careful," she said. "You have the temper of a tigress. How dare you fly out at me like that? The nuns would shut you up on bread and water."

"As you will, no doubt, when you are my husband. I don't think I want a husband . . . me! I will not make you a good wife."

"You will, however, be a delicious . . . woman-to-love . . ." thought Felix and said aloud, "I won't tease you then, darling. I'll go away and leave you in peace. Engagements are the devil anyhow. Are we . . . all right again?"

"I suppose so," said Jocelyn limply. "Will your mother be back soon?"

"No. She has gone up the river to see a friend of hers in the sisterhood there. But don't worry, Felix. I'm better alone tonight. Mary will stay in. Good night. Forgive me. I was horrid."

"When he was gone Jocelyn went to her mother's prie-dieu and tried to pray. But the tears of anger and tears of penitence were dry at their very source.

In her own room, she sat down on her bed and thought. After a while she pulled out a big leather valise from her closet and rummaged there. She dressed herself in a pleated short skirt, a black tight jersey, long-sleeved, high in the throat, a little jacket and a big old tam o'shanter.

Before she put this on her head she ran her fingers back and forth through her sleeked thick hair until it was the wild unruly mop of a goliath. She went to her mother's room and examined the likeness she had so achieved, a girl with a slim high-coloured face, a firm rich mouth, a pair of tilted gleaming eyes; a girl with a swagger that was made charming by its lines of race and breeding.

"Oh, Lynda Sandal," said Jocelyn, "I am going to like you. Maybe you will be wonderful."

Colling a trunk rope round her arm she switched off her light and swung her leg across the window-sill.

It was all dark below in the well. There lay the entrance to the alley close by the ladder's foot. The city with its lights and towers, its horns of river travel and of land traffic, called to her blood.

All the way down toward that dark pavement with its exit to an unknown world, she said, "I'm not afraid. I'm not afraid."

By the time she reached the pavement, this was true.

"Does a Mr. Sandal live here?"

"Yes'm. Tree flightup."

Jocelyn handed the Japanese boy some money and told him to pay and to dismiss her driver. Then, her heart jumping and her lips cold, she began to mount the stairs in front of her. The hall she left was dimly lighted. Behind closed doors there were subdued regular sounds of card-playing; the clack and shuffle, the light slipping noises, brief statements, the shifting of chairs. On the second floor people were dancing and making a great jolly hubbub. On the third floor when the breathless adventurer came nearer to it there was sound of low masculine comment and again the clack and shuffle of cards. A door stood open.

Jocelyn paused before she took the last few steps of her ascent. She wished to reconnoiter and to command her disordered pulses and her jerking nerves. Her eyes were on a level with the threshold of the open door. Opposite her across the width of the comfortable shabby room Nick Sandal crouched on a battered sofa back against the wall. He was twisted up painfully among some tattered cushions and smoked a pipe. His bright eyes watched a group of four men playing cards at a table.

The faces of three of these men were visible to Jocelyn, all in their shirt-sleeves, two in profile and one facing her. The fourth sat with his back turned and wore a coat.

The game came to an end, the man whose back was turned to her pushed back his chair and rose.

"Blast that Jack of Diamonds!" he said and picking up a card slung himself in a supple and silent fashion across the room and stuck the cardboard object against the wall, using for the purpose a piece of chewing gum. "That diamond digger sits on my neck like a fetish. I'll put a hole into his blond beauty." And stepping back a pace he took a knife from his hip pocket, balanced it in his palm and threw it with swift and furious skill so that it stood quivering in the centre of the card.

Thereafter, all four men returned to their play. The knife-thrower now faced Jocelyn. He was young with naturally vivid features which had been worked into a grim and iron mask.

Then he glanced up from his cards and saw her. He rose as though her silent face out there had frightened him. She came rapidly up the last few steps and stood before him at the door.

"Boys, this is my daughter," he cried out sharply.

"Go on with your game, please," she said. "I came to talk to my father."

The men obeyed with alacrity. Jocelyn sat down beside the cripple on his battered lounge and put her hand uncertainly upon his free one.

RETURN TO HATS

The makers of hats for men, whose business has suffered severely since the bare-head mania has prevailed, have reason for new hope. It has been discovered, according to some authorities on disease of the scalp, that going hatless in summer, instead of promoting the health and growth of the hair, is a potent factor in producing baldness. — Woodstock Sentinel-Review.

BEHIND THE HEADLINES OTTAWA

Are there any practical signs which indicate beyond a shadow of a doubt that the present deep friendship and influence existing between Washington and Ottawa will eventually lead to a foreign policy on the part of the United States that will have as its basis the open alliance of these two world powers in the event of one or other becoming involved in any future conflict? Notwithstanding all stories and gossip to the contrary, there is a strong opinion that Canada has succeeded to join the two English-speaking nations into one combination to fight the forces of international anarchy and lawlessness, with the probability that this will be accomplished. In other words, this vital question can be answered in the affirmative.

The President of the United States, the Secretary of State, and various high officials of the American Government have stated time and time again that isolation is no longer security, that the United States is openly opposed to the dictatorships, and that the American Government is in favour of peaceful settlement of all international disputes, that the essence of American foreign policies are to obtain respect for law and order, even if the United States has to fight for this right, that it is absurd and futile to imagine that the United States is certain to remain neutral in any future conflict, and that the Monroe Doctrine is now extended to include the Dominion of Canada. These pronouncements have been followed by activities that include important trade and credit arrangements between the American Government and the British Commonwealth of Nations.

These verbal and written indications of unity of thought and action between the United States and the British Commonwealth of Nations were followed up by some unusual happenings. The American Government established a very powerful North Atlantic squadron to protect the seaboard of both Canada and the United States, and which military, naval and aviation experts interpreted as a strong preparation to re-enforce the British fleet in the event of any future warfare. Not only has the United States added 55 war vessels, including dreadnaughts, submarines, destroyers and aircraft carriers, but they have authorized an increase of 20 per cent in naval tonnage, ordered 338 latest-model anti-aircraft guns that are able to protect the entire stretch of coastal cities of the United States and Canada, commenced preparations for the manufacture of war materials and otherwise done things to convert peace-time factories suddenly, if any emergency should arise, in order that they may be able to operate for war-time production. Furthermore there were several hints or suggestions that the Neutrality Act and the Johnston Act, which are supposed to keep American governments out of any wars, may be ignored at the entire discretion of the officials in Washington.

Americans have boasted that they want to remain neutral and avoid every risk that may involve that nation in any European quarrel or other international conflict. It is a basic principle of American diplomacy since the days of Washington himself, yet four years in twenty-four hours.

since the foundation of the American Republic there have been two great European wars, and the United States engaged in both struggles in the face of this historic slogan. Washington declared war on London in 1912 during the Napoleonic wars, though President Jefferson desperately tried to remain neutral, and in 1917 President Woodrow Wilson declared war on Germany, though he was elected the President on the platforms of the Democratic Party, which proclaimed that they would keep the United States out of the World War. This means that there is no guarantee that the American Government would remain neutral in any war in the future, especially since the Supreme Court of the United States has stated that "the President of the United States is the sole organ of the nation in its external affairs, and its sole representative with foreign nations," which renders it extremely doubtful if the United States would remain aloof whenever the English-speaking nations would be endangered. The Johnston Act bars credit from being extended to foreign debtors of the American republic who defaulted repayments of the World War loans, but it is not likely that this Act will be used against the British Commonwealth in the event of any future conflict. There seems to be some very reliable reports along this line.

This increasing friendship and union of forces between the United States and the British Commonwealth of Nations are the direct results of Canada's efforts to strengthen the ties of the English-speaking peoples of the globe, and which indirectly is in the best interests of this young country. It offers Canada the protection of combined naval forces of over 3,165,423 tonnage, which is the latest strength of the United States and British navies. It means that there is an air force of over 9,000 airplanes to protect this huge country. Finally, it renders Canada practically impregnable from any effort of invasion and in these very unsettled times of international anarchy, chaos and where might is right, it is a guarantee of force against force.

Nevertheless, Canada has been accused of following a "middle-of-the-road" policy in face of her determined efforts to line up with both the United States and Britain, which steps clear of isolation on one side and direct intervention on the other, being content to charter a course under what remains of international law and order. It infers that it is a foreign policy that is continued on an hour to hour basis in order to be on the best and most friendly terms with all nations, which is an essential principle on account of the fact that this country depends greatly on foreign trade and commerce for the standard of living that is maintained by the average citizen of this country. Is this true? What is the opinion along Parliament Hill regarding Canada's attitude towards Germany, Italy and Japan? These questions, which have been arousing so much excitement throughout Canada, will be answered in detail in this column next week.

PULLET GOES ON SPREE
A white leghorn pullet owned by Fred Bennett, of Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., apparently believes in the principles of mass production. She laid four eggs in twenty-four hours.

BELLEVILLE MARKET

Prices generally noted a slight uptrend on Belleville Market on Saturday. Potatoes shot upward sharply with bushel lots going at sixty cents and baglots at ninety. Eggs likewise maintained a high tone with "A" selects selling at thirty-eight and forty cents per dozen, mediums at thirty-five cents and pullets at thirty-two cents per dozen.

Chickens were fairly plentiful in the inside market with young five and six-months old birds offered at sixty cents each. Yearlings and fowl were offered at from eighty cents upward each. A few ducks were offered at one dollar each.

Northern Spies made their market debut and headed a fine fall and winter apple display. Tree-picked No. 1's were offered at one dollar and one half per bushel, with some windfalls quoted at one dollar per hamper-lot. Tolman Sweets in increased quantity and of good sample, were quoted at the same prices, Macintosh Reds, tree-packed fruit were quoted at $1.75 per bushel while Snows moved fairly briskly at $1.50 per hamper for picked fruit.

Blue and white grapes, gradually passing out of the market picture were sold at thirty-five and thirty-nine cents per six-quart basket. Grand Duke plums and German prunes were offered at fifty and sixty cents per six-quart basket respectively.

Winter vegetables in bushel lots made their appearance on the market with onions quoted at eighty cents, parsnips at seventy-five cents. Cabbage and cauliflower, the latter productive of some splendid samples, sold at from five cents per head upwards. Lettuce, radishes, broccoli, and other staple vegetable lines sold at prevailing prices.

The cynosure of boyish eyes were small collie pups which a youthful vendor offered at two dollars each.

Lovers of fish were offered whitefish and fresh lake trout at twenty cents per pound, with a slight additional charge for cleaning and filleting, with pickled quoted at eighteen cents per pound and the popular mudcat moving well at two pounds for twenty-five cents.

CAROLE LOMBARD — 112-POUND CHAMPION

Valiant is the word for Carole — and for everybody else concerned with the making of the David Selznick technicolour production "Nothing Sacred."

Miss Lombard is claiming nothing for herself. She nominates director William Wellman for chief honours, backing up the nomination with the gift of a straight-jacket. "Just a token of esteem," she says.

Wellman is inclined to lay it all to the script, a Ben Hocht accomplishment, based on an original by James H. Street. Mostly, though, Wellman would rather not talk about it. For the present, he prefers to see nothing, hear nothing and say nothing. With perfect quiet and no excitement of any kind, he thinks he should be all right in a few weeks.

Frederick March, co-starring with Lombard in the picture, is also uncommunicative. "I have nothing to say," he says, "except that Miss Lombard is probably insane and that Mr. Wellman certainly is. Maybe I am, too. Maybe everybody is."

The shape of things to come emerged early in the production of "Nothing Sacred." Lombard and March spent their lunch hours tearing around the studio in a fire-truck, siren wide open. The truck has been borrowed from the Los Angeles Fire Department for a picture sequence. The technical department has to post a guard by a six meter yacht standing in a cradle on the set, to prevent the volunteer buffs setting it on fire in order to test their equipment. The yacht, like the fire-truck and Miss Lombard and Mr. March, also has a part in "Nothing Sacred."

As shooting on the picture progressed, the studio atmosphere grew even more turbulent. Air guns made their appearance and were immediately adapted by the company for hell-raising purposes.

Miss Lombard and Mr. March persuaded Mr. Wellman to join them in taking pot shot at the lights on the roof of the sound stage. Wellman agreed as if in a dream, shattering two to one each for the stars.

Wellman's turn came later, when the two stars had to stage a scene in which they slug each other about a hotel room. The scene ends when March sends Lombard flying across the room with a well-placed kick in the rear. "Realism!" shouted Wellman through three hours of rehearsal, "let's have more realism."

And again, when the script called for five hundred odd pounds of wrestle to come hurtling out of the ring and land in Lombard's lap, Wellman discovered that somehow or other he couldn't get enough realism into the sequence.

This wasn't all Carole had to go through — for the sake of her art. A swimming pool sequence, with Carole and Frederick March swimming about with their clothes on and shouting insults at each other, was a sort of ordeal by water that had to be coped with after the ordeal by fire.

To add to the general insanity, studio hands indulged in an orgy of ear-splitting noise-making, using the sirens, whistles and bells which were stock props in most of the picture's scenes. Carole's appearance on the lot to begin each day's work was the signal for an Armistice Day uproar, the final lunatic note being a chorus of barks echoing about the cavernous studio. Deep-toned sirens and a twenty-one gun salute with air guns hailed the arrival of March and Wellman.

The idea was expanded to meet the periodic visits of distinguished studio guests, Selznick, arriving with a party of visiting celebrities, discovered that his studio had been turned into Bedlam, livened up by Hollywood sound effects.

Prince Pratap Singh Gaekwar, hier apparent to the throne of Baroda, was profoundly impressed by Hollywood methods. "Such vitality, such elan," he murmured, "no wonder America leads the world in making pictures." He spoke of the motion picture studio picture studios in Bombay, adding regretfully, "we have not the technique of you Americans, alas."

Fredric March probably had the gayest time of anybody. Besides his fire truck and six meter yacht, and the air guns, he had the run of a full-sized locomotive and eight cars which had been backed up on a siding a short distance from the studio, to provide realistic sound effects.

And, of course, the obligations of his role, calling on him to romp through most of the picture rough-housing with Carole Lombard, constituted not the most exacting task in the world.

"Nothing Sacred", now playing at the McCarthy Theatre, Belleville, and continuing until Saturday, with Charles Winninger, Walter Connolly, former light-heavyweight champion Maxie Rosenbloom and a host of others supporting the stars. The picture is a United Artists release.

Needy children from all over the Province are treated regardless of race, creed or financial circumstance.

This policy has been continued for over 60 years in the firm belief that everyone who understands the facts would want this great work to continue . . . would agree that no Ontario child should be denied a chance for health or escape from deformity if mere money makes the difference.

Over 95% of our beds are in Public Wards.

The Hospital receives no support from the Toronto Federation for Community Service because patients are accepted from all parts of the Province.

We must therefore appeal to a humane and generous public to take care of an annual deficit . . . this year it is $68,000.00.

Please mail a donation to the Appeal Secretary, 67 College Street, Toronto.

The thanks of little children will be your reward.

The Hospital for Sick Children

Every morning in the year famous surgeons come to our operating rooms to donate their services. More than $100 operations are performed annually. But there are many extra services and the maintenance of the necessary service is very costly.

Since 1928 the service rendered by the always-overcrowded Out-Patient Department has more than doubled. Last year 64,414 individual treatments were given. This service yields a small revenue—but not nearly enough.

He is keenly interested in the events of the day and is a frequent visitor to this village. The anniversary of his natal day was spent quietly at his home, surrounded by members of his family.

Numbered among the many congratulatory messages received by Mr. Bedell were those from Premier M. F. Hepburn and Dr. J. A. Faulkner, of which he is particularly proud. With his many friends the News-Argus joins in wishing him many more happy birthdays.

BROTHER OF STIRLING RESIDENT DIES AT OTTAWA

William Burke, retired Separate School principal of Ottawa, and father of Captain Desmond Burke, noted Canadian rifle shot, died at Ottawa on Monday. He was 73 and a native of Marmora. During his 51 years in the teaching profession he was principal of three Separate schools, St. Patrick's, St. Joseph's and St. Brigid's. He also taught school at Peterborough and Calgary before going to Ottawa 41 years ago.

Captain Burke owed much of his success as a rifle shot to his father, who began teaching him when he was 17. Captain Burke, when 19, won the King's prize at Bisley and since then he has been a member of the Canadian Bisley team 12 times. Survivors include another son, Edmund Burke, and a daughter, Mrs. John Lagdon, both of Montreal. Mrs. James Fitzpatrick, of Stirling, is a sister of the deceased gentleman.

GRILLS — SIMPSON

A very pretty autumn wedding was solemnized at high noon on Wednesday, October 12th, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Hamilton, when Mary Elizabeth Simpson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Simpson, of Havlock, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Everett George Grills, son of Mr. Joseph Grills and the late Mrs. Grills, of Stirling in the presence of a few immediate relatives and friends. Rev. W. J. Scott, of Stirling, was the officiating clergyman.

To the strains of Lohengrin's Bridal chorus, rendered by Miss Dorothy Elliott, of West Huntingdon, the bridal party took their places under an arch of Autumn decorations and the conventional marriage bell and streamers. The bride, given in marriage by her brother, Mr. Edward Simpson, looked charming in a gown of Glory blue crepe with pink trimmings and accessories and carried a shower bouquet of pink and white autumn flowers. She was attended by her sister, Elsie, wearing a frock of vintage wine crepe with white accessories and car-

COBBOURG MAYOR GETS $300 — HIS FIRST PAY

Cobourg town council passed a resolution voting $300 to Mayor Maurice Booth as an honorarium for his year's work. This is the first time a mayor has ever been paid in Cobourg, although towns of the same size as Cobourg in other localities pay their municipal heads and councils. It was pointed out that this was not by way of setting a precedent but to compensate the present mayor for the time he has expended on town business this year.

COUNSEL DILATORY

Prime Minister King was given public praise, and rightly, when he called for his Judicial (Bray Gun) enquiry. He got the best man possible to conduct it. He would get additional praise, the Journal thinks, if he would serve notice on the counsel he secured to assist the Commission that it had better get on with its job — which is to bring out the essential facts. Mr. Justice Davies himself has had to protest heatedly against evidence that has no relation to the essential facts.

REV. THOMAS McAFEE NEW MODERATOR

Rev. Thomas McAfee, minister of St. Andrew's Church in Arnprior, Ont., on Tuesday night was elected Moderator of the Montreal and Ottawa Synod of the Presbyterian Church in Canada. OFFICIAL VISIT OF DISTRICT DEPUTY

RT. WOR. BRO. C. H. KETCHESON GIVEN WELCOME — TOASTS HONOURED

Thursday night of last week was a gala night in the history of Stirling Lodge A.F. & A.M., No. 69, when some ninety members of the Masonic Order were present to welcome and do honour to Rt. Wor. C. H. Ketcheson, of Wallbridge, District Deputy Grand Master of Prince Edward District, on the occasion of his official visit. Among those present were visitors from Tweed, Madoc, Marmora, Frankford, Concession and Belleville lodges.

After a session of the lodge, during which the officers displayed their knowledge of the ritual of the order by conferring the initiatory degree on one candidate, the members repaired to the banquet hall, where the fourth degree was conferred under the direction of Junior Warden Harry Morrow. At the conclusion of the dinner toastmaster during a programme in which a number of toasts were honoured.

To Rt. Wor. Bro. E. A. Carleton, P.D.D.G.M., was given the task of proposing the toast to Grand Lodge and in his remarks he outlined the set-up of the Grand Lodge and the work of the various departments.

Rt. Wor. Bro. C. H. Ketcheson, D.D.G.M. on rising to reply to this toast, voiced his appreciation of the fine reception given him, and spoke of the fine hospitality that prevailed in the Stirling Lodge. For his main address he chose the subject "The Volume of the Sacred Law," and delivered an inspirational talk on this emblematic symbol of Masonry.

The toast to Canada and the British Empire was proposed by Bro. James Hough, of Deseronto, who declared that we as true Canadians and Masons must see that Canada's place will always be in the forefront in the defence of the British Empire. Let us all think of our duty as Canadians and our part in the British Commonwealth.

Bro. H. E. Welsh, M.L.A. for East Hastings, replied to the toast and during the course of his remarks referred to the unlimited natural resources of our country. However, material things are not everything. We have eleven million Canadians with a common devotion to one ideal — individual freedom. In the trying times of recent weeks the eyes of Canadians from coast to coast turned as a unit to the centre of the Empire. We followed Neville Chamberlain to Germany on his mission of peace for humanity and when the truth is unfolded the world will recognize him as one of the greatest Englishmen who ever lived.

We, as Masonic brethren, represent as fine a cross-section of community life as one could find. A great responsibility rests upon us and we must instill the spirit of protection and all that the Union Jack means, into our boys and girls. As Masons, loyalty should be the keynote of our activities.

The toast to the visitors was proposed by Rt. Wor. Bro. T. W. Solmes, and responded to by Rt. Wor. Bro. J. O. Herity, of Belleville; Bro. Rev. Canon Swayne, of Bonarlaw; Bro. F. C. Beazer, of Roslin; Wor. Bro. Brown of Frankford; Wor. Bro. E. Rath, of Tweed and Wor. Bro. L. Kells, of Belleville.

A toast to the candidate was proposed by Wor. Bro. Percy McGuire, of Belleville and responded to by Bro. Cecil A. Baker.

During the evening the various addresses were interspersed with lively community singing, led by Bro. R. A. Patterson, and a solo was given by Wor. Bro. Jack Baker, of Bonarlaw.

Saw Two Deer

With the opening of the deer season only about a week away there is increasing evidence that these fleet-footed animals are quite numerous in this district. On Wednesday evening Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Thompson, of Sine, were motoring along the 6th concession of Rawdon, and when near the farm home of Mr. and Mrs. Burton Morton, two deer crossed the road in front of their car. It was necessary for Mr. Thompson to swerve the car sharply to one side to avoid hitting one of the animals.

SPECIAL SESSION OF COUNCIL

DISCUSS NEW DRAIN FROM MATTHEWS PROPERTY TO MILL STREET

A special meeting of the Village Council was held in the Council Chambers on Monday evening, with Reeve Cranston in the chair and Councillors C. B. Rollins, F. Stapley and Roy Eggleton in attendance.

Reeve Cranston reported that he had been interviewed by an official of the Federal Government and Mr. D. A. Thompson, architect, of Belleville, concerning the construction of a drain for the new post office site. To do this work it will be necessary to construct a drain on the west side of North Street from the south-east corner of the lot to the sewer at the north-east corner of F. McKee's property, a distance of some one hundred and twenty-five feet.

On motion of Councillors Rollins and Eggleton, responsibility for the proposed drain was assumed by the Village. There followed a lengthy discussion as to whether the drain would be constructed underneath the sidewalk on the west side of North Street or along the edge of the highway. In the one case it will mean building a new sidewalk, and in the other the permanent surface of the highway will have to be dug up. A final decision will be made in the future.

Clerk Geo. H. Luery was instructed to write the Ontario Department of Highways for permission to construct a drain on North St., from the corner of the Matthews property to the existing drain crossing the said street, so as to provide drainage for the new post office.

Thos. McCaughen waited on Council concerning the account for taxes on his property, but on motion of Councillors Stapley and Eggleton no action was taken. Reeve Cranston and Treasurer R. A. Patterson were

RAWDON NATIVE IN THE NEWS

IS INVENTOR OF MYSTERY RADIO CONTROL BOX FOR DISTANCE TUNING

Any day now you will be able to start your coffee maker in the kitchen without leaving your guests in the living room. At least, so it appears after an examination of the latest engineering development in radio which permits the listener to change stations, raise or lower the volume or even shut off the set by a wireless control for any adjoining room.

The "mystery control" which a well known company is now producing in Canadian factories is a complete little broadcasting station in itself which sends out radio waves to the 14-tube receiving set which it accompanies. By manipulation of a dial, one can change stations from a distance of about 150 feet from the receiving set.

The control device is a small box not much larger than two books, which can be carried to any part of the house or even outside the house. On it are the call letters of eight pre-set stations. By dialing the station one wishes to listen to, impulses are sent to the main set and the tuning immediately changes over to pick up the required station. Another device manipulates the volume and permits the set to be shut off.

It will be of particular interest to residents of Stirling and the surrounding community to know that the major part of the engineering work on the magic control was carried out by a young Canadian engineer, Leslie Thompson, who was born in Springbrook, about ten miles north of this village. His father, Mr. R. W. Thompson, now of Teeswater, Ont., made cheese in the Springbrook district for a number of years, and is a cousin of Reeve George E. Thompson and Kenneth Thompson, of Springbrook, and Mrs. Clarence Sutherland, of Stirling. Leslie Thompson attended High School in Picton, and is a graduate of Queen's University.

INJURED IN RUNAWAY

Clarence Dunham, of Wellmans, suffered a painful injury to his left arm when his team took fright and bolted from Sharp's Grist Mill at Hoards, throwing him from the wagon. The injured man was brought to the office of Dr. W. H. Pedley, in Stirling, where it was discovered that a bone in his arm was fractured.

APPOINTED DELEGATES

A meeting of the Conservative Association was held in H. C. Martin's office last night for the purpose of appointing delegates to the convention being held in Marmora on Wednesday next, to choose a Conservative candidate for the riding of Hastings-Peterborough. Mr. J. S. Morton acted as chairman, and the following delegates were selected: Mrs. Nina Morton and Messrs Gil. Thompson, H. C. Martin and W. C. West. Alternates chosen were Mrs. W. J. Whitty, Messrs T. W. Solmes and C. R. Bastedo.

TAXES MUST BE PAID

Delinquent taxpayers in the Village are to be dealt with severely unless arrangements are made for the payment of all arrears by the middle of the coming month. At a special meeting of Council held on Monday night, the Village tax collector presented a full report, showing several thousand dollars owing the Village, and the Council instructed him to collect forthwith. Members of the Village Council can in no way be blamed for taking steps to collect what is due the village. Money is required to keep the municipal business going and when taxes are not paid, it means the municipality is required to borrow from the bank and pay quite a large sum in interest charges. Furthermore, those citizens who pay their taxes promptly are being penalized for so doing by having to pay interest charges on loans which the municipality could avoid making, if delinquent taxpayers paid up. All those in arrears should make an effort to meet their indebtedness to the municipality and save any unpleasantness.

APPLY TO BICYCLES

Bicyclists are prone to forget that traffic regulations apply just as much to cyclists as any other class of traffic. There has been a large increase in the number using bicycles in the past few years and warnings have been issued time and time again that for their own safety riders of bicycles must obey the laws. A bicycle is an unstable vehicle and consequently it requires great care in its operation. Every motorist experiences a qualm when he passes a cyclist, whether on the open highway or in the city. Parties of two or three on bicycles, riding abreast, or weaving back and forth across a village street are even more dangerous. Perhaps one of the greatest menaces in connection with cycling, which incidentally is a helpful and enjoyable pastime, is the fact that so many children ride bicycles. They cannot be expected to display the same traffic sense as adults, and still they cannot be stopped from riding. This places a greater responsibility on the motorists who must exercise greater caution when passing wheels being ridden by children.

TIME TO ORGANIZE

Probably within the next six or seven weeks the hockey teams of the district will be on the ice getting in shape for the coming season's campaign, but so far nothing has been done in the way of organization locally. President Earl Fox, of the Trent Valley League, has stated that a meeting of the League Executive will be held about the middle of the coming month, and it will not be known until then what teams will compose the League. There is a rumour afloat that the Trenton "Couriers", last year's champions, will be weakened by the retirement of some of the older players and that there is some doubt if this team will operate. A team from Belleville, and a second team from Trenton are also reported as eager to gain admittance to this league, but it is extremely doubtful if any Belleville or Trenton team, other than the "Couriers", would be accepted. Small towns are at a big disadvantage when grouped with larger centres of population in any line of sport and the Trent Valley League should be kept free of city teams. So far as the Stirling team is concerned, the majority of last year's players are available, while some of the younger players will be making a bid for a place on the team. It is likely that an organization meeting will be held before long, when a definite decision will be reached over again placing an entry in the League.

THE LAYMAN'S PART IN HEALTH PROGRAMMES

The quality of performance of federal, provincial and local health organizations rests almost entirely on the qualifications of technical and professional personnel but there remains a valuable service for the layman to perform. That is to help create public opinion in favour of health conservation.

In this respect voluntary associations have given leadership for many years to public-spirited citizens — both professional and lay — in the promotion of preventative measures, but to a very large extent they place their dependence upon lay co-operation.

One thing that the layman can create in the public mind and in the minds of local governing bodies is an appreciation of the absolute necessity for properly trained personnel if public funds provided for health work are not to be largely wasted. This was pointed out in an address this year before the National Organization of Public Health Nurses at Kansas City by Dr. C. E. Waller, Assistant Surgeon-General of the U. S. Public Health Service.

"To be competent to perform these services," he proceeded to say, "the layman first must inform himself. He must know something of the theory and thought behind social work; know what social needs are essential in his community and what activities may be considered luxuries; know whether the existing official agencies are meeting the most important needs and whether such agencies are maintaining the highest standards of performance."

RURAL FALL FAIRS JUSTIFIED

With record attendances reported at many of the rural fall fairs of the district, there is likely to be less talk of discontinuing them, says the Ingersol Tribune. Stirling and Tweed Fairs ran into unfavourable weather this year, and as a result the gate receipts were down considerably from other years, but the other fairs were fortunate in having exceptionally fine weather and prospered accordingly.

Perhaps the improved means of transportation may eventually eliminate some of the smaller fairs and one or two fairs in each county may take the place of the more numerous ones which are now carrying on. But this season has shown that the rural fair has a definite place and under favourable conditions will attract large crowds.

Much depends on the ingenuity of the directors of the smaller fairs. Their problems, although different in scale from those of the larger exhibitions, are basically similar. They must provide a worthwhile show if they expect the people to attend. They must keep in touch with public interest and endeavour to provide features with a special appeal in their own district.

Of course one of the prime attractions of the rural fair is the opportunity to meet old friends and renew old acquaintances. Many a city-dweller finds some excuse for taking a day off to go to a country fair, preferably in the district where he formerly lived. The sight of the sleek, well-cared-for livestock, the profuse products of the soil and the appetizing displays of home-cooking and household arts satisfies some instinct which city life leaves hungry. Even more attractive are the faces of the holiday-makers which, though they may be marked by the constant battle with the elements, are free from the stigmata inflicted by the drive of the city.

CURRENT COMMENT

With the price of cheese remaining at or near the fourteen-cent mark, and the prices of eggs on the upgrade, things are looking better for the farmers.

Hallowe'en falls on Monday evening next, and it is expected that the witches and goblins will be about in numbers. Residents would do well to make preparations to treat their young friends on this happy occasion.

Fall is here and the falling of the leaves has prompted many of the village residents to rake them up and burn them. Unless watched carefully, these fires are dangerous and strict caution should be observed by Stirling residents. Many a disastrous fire has been caused by flying sparks from an unguarded bonfire.

The rain on Monday was welcomed by the farmers of this district. The country had become exceedingly dry and fall plowing operations were being held up. It is also reported that many of the cisterns and wells were getting low, and farmers are hoping for plenty of rain before the freeze-up comes along.

Advertising is necessary in these times. The merchant must go out to get business. It is a physical impossibility for him to make personal contact with all outside customers but he can reach practically all of them through the columns of the community newspaper. Even if every ad does not bring sales, it is a constant reminder of the store and its products.

Local hunters are anxiously awaiting the time when they will hie themselves to the north woods in search of the elusive deer. Trusty rifles have already been brought from their resting places since last fall to be carefully cleaned and oiled for what promises to be one of the best seasons in years. Frequent reports are heard of deer being seen in the northern section of the County and with the season opening within the next ten days the local nimrods are rapidly making plans to enjoy their annual sojourn in the woods.

Citizens of the town of Deseronto are opposed to compulsory pasteurization of milk and a petition carrying about 80 per cent. of the signatures of the citizens was forwarded to Queen's Park some time ago, but according to the Post, nothing has been heard from it. This is only what one might expect. In spite of those who claim that rich, untreated milk, fresh from the cow is superior to the pasteurized milk, in our opinion it is not. In many cases it is full of disease germs and a menace to human life. Children who drink it are still going to sanatoria with milk-borne tuberculosis.

It remains one of the unsolved mysteries why so many farmers do not mark their names on rural mail boxes. One may drive along any of the highways or concession roads in this section and it is doubtful if five per cent. of the mail boxes have the owners' names printed legibly upon them. In neglecting to have their name displayed on the mail box the farmer is overlooking a good advertising medium for his farm home. There would seem to be a possible opportunity for some enterprising painter who would go out in the country equipped with the necessary tools and prepared to do a quick, neat job, at a moderate price.

What Others Say

HOW WE'LL KNOW

(Tremonton Courier-Advocate)
When bank cheques are printed without a place to affix a stamp, then we shall know that the worst of it is over and happy days are on the way back again.

UNFORGIVABLE ERROR

(Walkerton Herald-Times)
When an error creeps into the columns of a newspaper, they usually cause the editor considerable embarrassment, but few mistakes would cause one's face to turn red as the typographical error in a recent issue of the Brussels Post. In recording a ladies' meeting, whereat the ladies exchanged house plants, the linotype operator left the "I" out of the word "plants."

THE EXCESSIVE BURDEN OF TAXES

Thé Bowmanville Statesman, discussing the excessive burden of taxation, enquires: "How many of us realize that every time we buy a box of matches, a package of cigarettes, a box of face powder, we are paying taxes? How many stop to think that on every item purchased the buyer is paying an eight per cent. sales tax, which really amounts to much more, because the tax is pyramided? Not only is the straight eight per cent. being paid, but it is also being paid on goods purchased and used in the manufacture of the taxable articles. Between excise tax and sales tax a 12 per cent. tax would be near the truth."

TWO DANGEROUS HABITS

(Gananoque Reporter)
At the Town Council meeting on Tuesday, reference was made to the practice of a number of children, and some not so young, riding two on a bicycle. The youngsters also have great fun playing in piles of leaves along the streets, but it is dangerous play.

One instance to come to our attention was of a young lad hiding in a pile of leaves at the edge of the roadway near his home, and a motorist came very close to the hiding place.

It may be "chummy" to ride two on a bicycle and great sport to play in the leaves, but both are dangerous habits when the streets are used for playgrounds.

A great many motorists regard bicycles as an "unknown quantity" when passing or meeting them, as some of the youngsters seem scarcely able to handle the machines with good judgment. If an accident were to occur, the relatives of the injured child or children would no doubt strongly criticize motorists generally "who drive as if they owned the streets," when the real blame might easily rest with the children, who sometimes thoughtlessly abandon good judgment in their play.

MURDEROUS CROSSINGS

(Cobourg World)
Only where war is raging are there towns so dangerous to get in or out of as Cobourg.

At both ends the town is bounded by a highway death trap. Every year these railroad crossings take a toll of human life. At present, if three months go by without a death at either of them, it is a matter of congratulation, worthy of a civic celebration.

At the close of the inquest on the unfortunate truck driver who lost his life at the eastern crossing on October 3rd, the Coroner said something should be done about the level crossings east and west of Cobourg, and the jury recorded their opinion that the present system of signals is not sufficient protection, recommending a bridge.

WHAT HAS BEEN DONE?
We want to know what the Dominion and Provincial departments concerned have said to our representatives, in Parliament, Legislature and Town Council. Obviously, some day the road must be taken under or over these crossings. We want an estimate from the Highway Department of just how many lives have to be sacrificed before the matter will be regarded as sufficiently urgent to warrant action. We want to know just what is the official excuse for the fact that bridges have not been built, and are not being built.

To say that the Province of Ontario cannot afford the money is to put forward an excuse that is as fantastic as it is shameful.

The Dominion Government announced some months ago the allocation of a large sum to the elimination of dangerous crossings. We have not heard yet that there are any more dangerous than those Cobourg death-traps. So they should be the first on the list. Then why has work not begun?

There must be action soon.

SPARE THE ROD AND SPOIL THE CHILD

(Cobourg Sentinel - Star)
Did you ever get a licking from your father? And if you never had, do you think you might have been a better man?

Very pertinent questions, indeed. But it is unusual to come across a man approaching middle age who has never been spanked. If it is right that he should have escaped the switch then he must have been a model boy — or his father was a man who believed other methods more effective.

No philosopher has had so much influence on the thinking of the Western world as Solomon — leaving aside the Divine, of course. No thinker or writer has awayed opinion so powerfully as has done the great solon of Israel. He must have had a marvellous experience with children. The records tell us definitely about his huge household of wives, but omit any calculations as to the number of children in his nursery. It would be interesting to know just how many he had. We cannot tell, but it seems perfectly safe to say that no man in mediaeval times, or since then, has been the acknowledged father of so many youngsters as he must have had.

What did Solomon say? Here it is, plainly set out: "He that spareth his rod hateth his son, but he that loveth him chasteneth him betimes."

There you are. If you are so inclined you can call Solomon's rod symbolical and take it that he meant punishment in any form that that very wise man considered most likely to be effective in correcting a wayward child.

Without allowing ourselves to be mixed up in any argument on the subject of parental discipline in the school or in the home, or getting into a discussion upon the merits of this or that method in general or what should be done in particular cases, there are some facts that can be cited from statistics which show what happens when errant youth is not rigidly disciplined in some way or another.

A MODERN PARABLE

Once there was a business man, And he was wondrous wise; Said he: "We'll save the money It takes to advertise. We've got the business going. We'll sit and take the kale. Why squander cash for printing? Our income cannot fall." Things prospered for a season, And prospects rose grew. Then sales began to dwindle; The Why? Nobody knew. The boss was fretful, worried, His face grew pale and drawn. The business "kept on going" — Going — now it's gone.

COVERING THE WORLD OF SPORT

Next Thursday night Boston Bruins invade Toronto to meet the Maple Leafs, and the opening gun will be sounded on another National League Hockey campaign. The dizzy whirl, which will spin through 48 games to eliminate only one of the seven clubs, will reach its annual climax next March when the six survivors will tangle for the Stanley Cup.

An attempt, at this stage, to predict the probable outcome of the league race would be much like following the procedure of the dear old lady at the race track (i.e. sticking a pin through the back of the program). In big league baseball it's easy. The so-called experts merely pick the previous champions to repeat, and let it go at that. In boxing the same method holds good, for a champion always enters the ring on the long end of the betting odds.

But what brave mortal will go out on a limb for Chicago Black Hawks, the battling brigade that came with a rush from third place in the American section last spring to take the premier honours? Granted, the Hawks have even a stronger squad than the one that upset the dope last time. But the trouble is, every other team is also stronger, bolstered up by veteran performers from the Disbanded Montreal Maroons and an unprecedented crop of rookies.

Lester Patrick has a youthful Ranger crew of speed demons, with Cecil Dillon, at 30, the oldest member on the roster. On the contrary, New York Americans' first-string line averages 30 years of age, yet no one will deny that Red Dutton's "keep punching" crew are a power to be reckoned with. Charlie Conacher is the big question-mark at Detroit. If the big ex-Leaf right-winger can regain his form Jack Adams' Red Wings may again reach the peak they attained in 1932-33. Led by Eddie Shore veteran defenceman who last season won the most valuable player award for the fourth time, the Boston Bruins are favoured to set the pace throughout. The two Canadian entries, Canadiens, of Montreal, and Toronto Maple Leafs, both have strong followings in the predictions league. Will Cude, veteran goal-tender of the Habitués, has called the Flying Frenchmen to finish no worse than second. Leafs, it has been stated, need only a capable right-winger to round out the machine to the satisfaction of Manager Conn Smythe and Coach Dick Irvin. If they have sifted one out of the wealth of candidates they have in training at Preston, the big blue and white wave may again roll over all opposition.

There they are, seven of the best, down on the mark waiting for the signal gun! You may have your personal favourite, and if so you're an even-money shot to tag the winner, for each one of the seven looks good enough to win the marbles at this time.

QUESTIONS DEPT. — What Club won the first National Hockey League campaign?

This year's Grand Circuit racing season has been a phenomenal one, from the standpoint of record-breaking performances, no less than five world's records having been tumbled from their pedestals this year. Dean Hanover, from Lawrence, B. Shepard's Hanover, Pa., farms, was the fastest four-year-old of the 1933 Grand Circuit season, stepping a mile in 1:58 1-2. Most sensational champion of the season is Billy Direct, 4-year-old son of Napoleon Direct. Owned by McConville and Downey of Ogdensburg, N.Y., and with Vic Fleming, of Dundas, Ont., handling the reins, Billy Direct paced a mile in 1:56, one-quarter second faster than Dan Patch's 23-year-old record.

But since Dan Patch's mark was not considered official because it was made with a shield to break wind resistance, the New York owned pacer really knocked 1 3-4 seconds from the world record held by Directum I, since 1915.

E. J. Baker's great 6-year-old trotter, Greyhound, lowered his record from 1:56 to 1:52 1-4 in an effort to regain his laurels as the world's most famous harness horse. Even though he failed, the stalwart grey gelding maintained his position as the fastest trotter in history.

Other world records established this year were by B. C. Mayo's Chief Counsel, of Tarboro, N.C.; Her Ladyship, a stablemate of Greyhound, and Rosalind, fastest-stepping trotting mare, owned by Gibson White, of Lexington, Ky. Chief Counsel covered the mark for 3-year-old pacers to 1:57 3-4. Her Ladyship paced a mile in 1:56 3-4 for a new mark for aged mares and Rosalind went the same distance in 1:56 3-4 to hang up a new record for aged trotting mares.

SPORTS ODDITY — What's in a name? Max Baer recently paid a $5 fine for a traffic violation in San Jose, Calif., to Jack Dempsey. The principals were not the well-known heavyweight champions, however, but Max Baer, a resident of Palo Alto, Calif., and Court Clerk Jack Dempsey. Then there is the member of the California U. freshmen rowing crew, George "Red" Oar!

Across the international border-line, football experts are going through the annual series of complaints and suggested remedies for what ails the game. Charles "Gus" Dorais, coach of the University of Detroit grid machine, takes the mother-of-pearl inland moustache cup for his potty panacea.

Dorais would eliminate the point-after-touchdown (known as the convert in Canadian football circles) from the code of rules. To settle tie scores he would have a ruling that the team gaining the most yards from scrimmage be declared the victor. The Michigan-Minnesota game that saw the former outplay the latter by a wide margin only to lose 7-6 when they failed to convert their lone touchdown while Minnesota did, is only one of many such examples that occur regularly, Dorais said.

We will grant him that, but to hand victory in a tie game to the team gaining most ground from scrimmage would be folly. We recently saw a game in which the losing team gained 18 first downs to seven for the winner. The latter squad only crossed their opponents 25-yard line three times, yet they scored a converted touchdown, kicked a placement and a single point for 10 points, capitalizing on each possible scoring opportunity. The losers outplayed them between the 25-yard lines, twice reached the 5-yard line, yet failed to score a single marker.

In our opinion, yards gained from scrimmage mean exactly nothing to the final summation, and the bewildered Dorais should be devoting his time to adding scoring punch to his squad, instead of thinking up rummy suggestions such as he made. Imagine a team winning a game by 0 plus 245 yards, three inches gained against 0 plus 243 yards, two feet 9 1-2 inches gained.

ONE YEAR AGO IN SPORT — On Oct. 28, 1932, Bunny Wadsworth, 280-pound middle of the Ottawa Roughriders, was exonerated on charges of rough play in connection with an injury to Harry Sonshine, Toronto Argos, who suffered a broken jaw in a game the previous Saturday.

ANSWERS DEPT. — When the National Hockey League was re-organized under its present set-up in 1917, Toronto Arenas were its first champions, also winning the Stanley Cup.

CAMPBELLFORD GIRL ORATORICAL WINNER

Telling in the form of a biography the story of aluminum, Yvonne Hollings, 13, a pupil of the Campbellford Public School was judged winner over a field of thirteen entries in the annual oratorical contest open to pupils of the public and separate schools of the district, which was held there.

FARMERS' EXPERIMENT PROVES COSTLY ONE

The experiment of a Deseronto Rd. farmer in attempting to break the habit of one of his cows from constently getting through a pasture field fence proved costly. He blindfolded the animal and all went well until the dog chased the cows and it ran smack into the farm residence, with fatal results.

EGGS ADVANCE ON BELLEVILLE MARKET

Egg prices shot sharply upwards on the Belleville Market on Saturday noting an increase of five cents as "A" selects were quoted at forty-three cents per dozen, with lediums selling at thirty-seven cents and pullets at thirty-three cents per dozen. Wholesale prices quoted to vendors were thirty-nine cents due to increasing demands on city markets.

The inside market had a good display of chickens, ducks, butter and eggs. Chickens were fairly plentiful with choice young birds selling at sixty and seventy cents each with yearling hens offered at from ninety cents to one dollar each. Ducks were quoted at from ninety cents to $1.25 each.

Farmers' butter remained steady at sixty-five cents for two-pound rolls with "singles" offered at thirty-five cents each. Home cooking booths were well patronized with shoppers availing themselves of the many delicacies offered.

Vegetables in bushel lots appeared to predominate this phase of offering on the outside market, with parsnips at seventy-five cents; carrots at sixty cents; onions at eighty cents; beets at seventy-five cents; and turnips at fifty cents rounding out a variable display. Cabbage and cauliflower were fairly plentiful selling at from five cents per head according to quality and size.

Potato prices remained steady in spite of slight fluctuations on other markets; bag lots were quoted at ninety cents. Radishes, celery and other bunch vegetables sold well at the usual prices.

Northern Spies headed a variable winter apple display with three-picked fruit quoted at $1.50 per hamper. Windfalls were offered at one dollar per bushel.

Large Greenings were quoted at $1.50 per bushel, Tolman Sweets at the same price and Delicious at one dollar per hamper for windfalls. Blue and white grapes were quoted at thirty-five and forty cents per basket with Large Prune Plums selling at sixty cents per six-quart basket. Home-grown cranberries made their initial appearance on the market and sold briskly at twenty cents per quart. Hickory nuts sold at the same price.

CHEESE BOARD

Cheese brought a price of 13 7-16 cents on Saturday morning's trading of the Belleville Cheese Board. A total of 2133 white, 398 assorted and 26 coloured cheese were offered. Buying was divided fairly evenly among Messrs Cook, McCreary, Taylor, Hart, Morton and Fraleigh.

Guest at the meeting was Mr. Wilson, Toronto, director of Co-operative Markets Branch, and chairman of the Ontario Control Board, who told members he was visiting Belleville merely to observe the local Board on its regular sales day.

NEWS OF INTEREST FOR BUSY FARMERS

Milk Production

With the exception of two small groups of counties, one in the central portion of the province taking in Halton, Peel and Simcoe, and the other in the East, including Lennox and Addington, Frontenac and Glengarry the condition of the pastures is above average. As a result milk flow is holding up well and all classes of livestock are in good shape. The quantity of milk sent to cheese factories and creameries in September of this year as compared with September last year, showed a considerable increase in South Western and Central Ontario, but a very substantial decline in Eastern Ontario.

Current Crop Report

Weather conditions during late September and early October were very satisfactory for the development and harvesting of late crops. The growth of both turnips and mangolds has been very good and production per acre will be slightly better than last year. Sugar beets are yielding considerably higher this season with the tonnage per acre placed at 10.40 tons as compared with only 7.94 tons in 1932. Corn for ensilage has been all cut and placed in silos. Farmers growing this crop obtained unusually good yields this season. The average for Ontario is now estimated at 10.30 tons per acre as compared with 9.71 tons a year ago. The main crop of potatoes, however, is giving disappointing yields in most counties, particularly in Northern Ontario, and the total production for 1933 is the lowest since the year 1916, with the per acre yield estimated at only 48 cwt. as against 67 cwt. last year. Fall wheat is making good growth although there are many fields of late sown wheat. More than the usual amount of fall plowing has been completed to date.

Sugar Beet Yield Good

Although the acreage of this crop amounted to only 28,200 acres this year, as compared with 30,300 acres in 1932, estimated production is placed at 293,300 tons as against 240,400 tons in 1932. Owing to favourable weather conditions the yield per acre will be slightly more than 10 tons, whereas a year ago the yield was 7.94 tons per acre. Sugar content will average over 15 per cent. Harvesting commenced about October 1st, and factories started operations on October 5th. Prices this season are $4.25 per ton for "clean" beets testing 14 per cent. sugar, delivered at factory, or $5.50 per ton is delivered to weigh stations.

Inspect Ravages

The European corn borer, as mentioned in the September Report, decreased in number in Essex and Kent counties, but is still quite abundant there in some localities. East of Toronto it is about the same, on the average, as in 1932. In Middlesex, Lambton, Elgin and Norfolk counties there has been a decided increase. Elgin and Lambton at present are the most heavily infested counties.

White grubs are very numerous in sandy sod areas in Hastings and Peterborough counties. As they are only in the first stage they will do much more damage next year when they will be in the second year stage and therefore larger than in 1932. In York, Ontario, and Durham counties, the white grubs are in their second year stage and have injured severely a number of timothy meadows and old pastures, and also have been troublesome to vegetables. In these latter areas there will be little or no trouble next year.

Squash bugs are still numerous, especially in gardens. Grasshoppers are more abundant than usual in almost every area visited. It is probable that if the weather next spring is favourable they may cause a good deal of damage, especially in waste lands, old pastures and meadows and crops immediately surrounding these.

Zebra caterpillars in the northern part of Peel and a few other areas are very abundant on turnips.

The variegated cutworm and the greenhouse leaf tier have injured some fields of celery in the Burlington area.

Stored grain insects seemed to be decidedly more abundant in farm granaries than in the average year. These insects are capable of causing grain to heat. Running the grain through a fanning mill on a cold day will take out the insects, and allow the grain to cool down.

Wild Carrot Spreading At An Alarming Rate

Wild Carrot is spreading at an alarming rate in Ontario and is considered one of the most objectionable weeds in the Province, says J. D. McLeod of the Crops, Seeds and Weeds Branch. It is a biennial and requires two years to produce seed. Flowers may be seen from July to September in white clusters which are flat topped when open. When nearing maturity these flower clusters curl up and if plants are not destroyed they will break off during fall and winter, scattering millions of seeds over frozen ground and snow. Thus it will be seen that clean areas miles distant may be infested if plants are permitted to mature seed. The importance of destroying all plants immediately after they come in flower cannot be emphasized too strongly, Mr. McLeod states.

The seeds of Wild Carrot, thousands of which may be found on an average plant, bear rows of prickles which stick to animals, clothing, etc., and are thus carried long distances.

This weed does not give any difficulty in fields where thorough cultivation and a short rotation of crops is practised. However, in meadows, which are down two years or more, in clover and timothy fields which are being kept for seed and in pasture fields, fence lines, waste places and roadsides, it is rapidly becoming one of our worst weeds in that it smothered out pasture and hay crops, robs the soil of plant food and moisture and lowers the market value of seed crops.

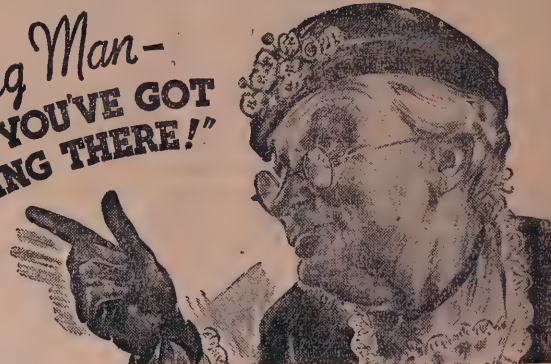

A short rotation — clovers, buckwheat, hoed crops and early summer cultivation, followed by fall wheat or rye are excellent methods of controlling this pest. Pulling, spudding or cutting for two years in succession will not give new plants an opportunity to mature seed and will lessen the amount of Wild Carrot considerably. When a single plant or small patch is observed all other work should be dropped until every plant is eradicated. All clover and timothy fields being kept for seed should be gone over carefully and all Wild Carrot plants rogued out.

Sheep will keep wild carrot cropped close if permitted to pasture on an infested area before plants become too far advanced.

Pasture fields or hay fields where a single cut of hay has been taken off early should be trimmed again first in September and if plants have reached the curling up stage the whole area should be raked up and burned.

Chemical weed killers are the only practical solution for the control of this weed on roadsides, fence lines and all areas where it is impossible to cultivate. Experiments conducted at various points throughout the Province have proven conclusively that this weed can be destroyed by spraying with Sodium Chlorate without any permanent injury to the grass, using from 1-4 to 1-2 a pound per gallon of water. Plants should be sprayed to saturation a day or two after the first blooms have appeared using a high pressure sprayer.

BEAUTY PROBLEMS

Barbara Lynn

Eminent Beauty Authority and Adviser, who writes weekly articles on Beauty Problems for many Canadian Newspapers.

BEAUTY BREVITIES

That tan you got in the bright sunny days looked most attractive at the time, but you will find some difficulty in reconciling it with darker clothes! Here are some hints to help you in offsetting your tan.

Milk is a good bleaching lotion and also mildly astringent. Sour milk has drastic bleaching properties, too, but some of you may find it too acid for the skin. When this is the case, buttermilk should be substituted.

Table cream helps to soften the skin, but it should be used very rarely as it encourages the growth of hair on the face.

And here is a buttermilk facial that is not at all hard to apply, and which will give your face a treat:

Get some absorbent cotton, cut it into strips and soak them in buttermilk. Put them over the face until it is entirely covered, then lie down and relax for 30 minutes or so until the cotton is quite dry. Now remove the strips and wash your face in warm water. Be careful to avoid pulling the muscles in a downward direction. Next rinse the face with cold water, using a face cloth repeatedly until the skin tingles.

Next pat on an astringent or face freshener lotion and leave this on for a few minutes, finally removing the lotion with either cold water or a cleansing cream. Pat on some tissue cream (with a Vitamin F base, so that it will combat wrinkles and prevent sagging), massage it well into the skin, and finally wipe off the face with a soft towel, before applying make-up.

Incidentally, NEVER rub the face with a rough towel, or scrub vigorously. The face requires careful and constant care.

Hands

So many women neglect their hands when a little daily care will so easily keep them soft and smooth. If you have to immerse the hands in warm or hot water, always be careful to rinse them afterwards in cold water. And if you can massage them with hand cream, you will keep them satiny soft.

Every woman should have a bottle of hand lotion in the bathroom. A mild solution of glycerine and lemon juice will suffice, or even that good old favourite, glycerine and rose water. Remember that work discolors the hands is no excuse for having them rough and unkempt. It is so easy to have graceful and lovely hands.

We your fellow workers have gathered here tonight to show our esteem for you on the occasion of your retirement from the Canadian National Railways after 28 years of continuous service.

We would like to present you with something to remind you of the good wishes that we have for you in your days of rest from railroad toil. William Bray was always thought of as

FOURTH INSTALMENT

Synopsis

Jocelyn Harlowe, raised in a French convent, at the age of eighteen joins her mother, Marcella, in New York. Worried about her safety, because she is unfamiliar with the modern world and has developed into a beautiful woman, her mother's first wish is to get her safely married. Attending her first ball, Jocelyn meets Felix Kent, rich, handsome and nineteen years older than herself. Encouraged by her mother, she and Felix quickly become engaged. Alone in her apartment one night, a cripple, Nick Sandal, enters, by the fire escape, confides in her that he is her father and that her real name is Lynda Sandal. Uncertain of whether she wants to get married so quickly, Jocelyn becomes irritable with Felix and one night decides to go and talk things over with her mysterious father. As Lynda Sandal she goes to his house, climbs three flights of stairs and enters a room where he is sitting with several men in the midst of a card game, to whom he introduces her as his daughter.

"I wanted to see you, father. I got out the way you showed me. Mother doesn't know I'm here."

"Nothing wrong then?"

"No."

TELEPHONE TALKS IN THE WATSON FAMILY

"Butcher, Baker, Dressmaker, Hairdresser, Grocer, Druggist, Doctor . . . and Friends!"

Mrs. Watson is merely naming the important people she reaches by telephone—some of them every day—saving endless delays, needless risks and many tiresome journeys. The telephone is so much a part of the daily routine that its importance is often overlooked—until, like Mrs. Watson, you actually start to check up on what it does for you.

The rates for residence telephone service are surprisingly low—only a few cents a day. You really cannot afford to be without a telephone.

"I felt that I must see you. There's something in me that belongs to you. And I am really very lonely."

"Lonely? With a fiancé and a mother and a crowd of friends?"

Nick put an arm roughly around her. "All right, Lynda. I'll be your friend. I don't mind loving you. Only it's a rash move on your part, you know. I'm not the most creditable parent in the world."

"But look here, old girl. You've been carefully raised in a religious atmosphere and all that. Doesn't your little old conscience say anything about deceiving a kind mother and that good fellow with the neat face whose photograph you showed me?"

"My conscience? But Father, haven't I a sort of duty to you? Don't you need me as much as they do?"

"No, I don't. And you haven't. Don't fool yourself. You can't bolster up your conscience with that truck, my girl."

Jocelyn began to look passionate and her yellow eyes glowed. "All right, I don't care. Mother won't tell me anything. She has her secrets, and she keeps them. I shall have one of my own. Felix is as locked up as his own great big shining safe. They both keep life, real life, away from me as though it were some sort of a reptile. I want to know people, all kinds of people, different sorts of people. I want to know how good it is to be bad, and how bad it may be to be good. I want adventure, risks, dangers; I want—"

"You want too much. You're only a girl and what's worse, you're a young lady! Laugh that off if you can, Miss Jocelyn Harlowe."

"Hush! Not here. Here I'm Lynda Sandal."

At that Nick threw back his head and laughed.

"You win. And I surrender. Lynda Sandal, I hereby take you as my child for better or for worse and promise to show you all the reality and the adventure I can decently supply. In order to seal our compact and to show my sincerity," he stood up, lifted his hand in a great gesture and raised his voice, "Lynda, I want you to meet some of my friends."

At the changed timbre of his voice the four card players turned.

"Boys, I want to present to you my daughter, Miss Lynda Sandal. Mr. James Drury, Mr. Saul Morrison and Mr. Gustave Lowe. Jock Ayleward, my protégé and my protector."

Jock rose and bowed. He was the young man with the queer eyebrows and the flexible nose, the one who had thrown the knife.

"Don't stop playing. May I watch the game?"

"We're quitting. Miss Sandal. So long, Old Nick. See you later at the hunting grounds, Ayleward."

They went, slipping into tight neat coats, sleeping on their hats at rakish angles, smiling at Lynda last with probing looks.

Jock stayed near the table gathering up the cards.

"Why did you knife the Knave of Diamonds, Mr. Ayleward?" asked Lynda, watching him.

"He's an old enemy of mine, Miss Sandal. He looks like a real knave I know."

"Well," drawled Sandal from behind them with sudden suave severity, "next time you throw knives on my premises I'll kick you out of here."

Jock turned to smile at him with sweetness.

"I'm sorry, old Nick. When I think of that Felix face of his it brings the devil into my brain, and I go blind."

Jocelyn found herself stammering.

"A Felix face? You mean—the Knave of Diamonds? Why do you call him that? He reminds you of some one named Felix whom you hate?"

"Well, yes, Miss Sandal. A regular knave—"

"But, please tell me. Felix who?"

"Hold your fool tongue, Jock," cried Nick fiercely. "And get out of here. Can't I have my rooms to myself sometimes without a cub of a card-sharper loafing about them?"

Ayleward, scared and blinking, like a boy that had been cuffed ruthlessly and without warning, muttered some unintelligible excuse and got himself out hastily.

Jocelyn turned to her father as the door closed.

"Why did you stop him? Was it—" has it anything to do with my Felix?"

"No, you little idiot! Didn't you ever hear of Felix the Cat? I thought not. You don't know anything, do you? He's a cartoon pussy of varying adventures. You leave our lingo alone, girl, until I give you a few lessons. I stopped him because once he gets on that Felix Cat subject there's no getting rid of him. Come and sit down here."

Before she left her father, that strange adventurous night, Jocelyn questioned him:

"What is the hunting ground?"

"A gambling place."

"Do you hate my mother?"

"I've outgrown hatreds."

"Do you want me to marry Felix Kent?"

A shrug. "Mr. Dooley said 'Take the first one that asks you. They're all alike.' Kent has money so he'll probably run straight."

"Do you suppose he'll make me happy?"

"No, my dear. No man has ever made a woman happy. She must manufacture happiness for herself, or acquire none."

"I think that you and my mother are alike."

"God forbid! I mean, alike in this one respect. Neither of you has found happiness in being loved."

After a long and troubled silence she asked him: "When may I come again to see you?"

"Whenever you please, my dear, or can make it convenient. I am nearly always at home. Most of the time on the old sofa. Every day I find it harder to get about."

"Oh, Father, can't something be done?"

He shook his head.

"Jock has done what he could for me. He takes care of me now, you must know. It's fair enough. There was a time when I took care of him."

"He loves you, Father. I can see that when he smiles."

"He's not a bad scout but don't get romantic about him, Lynda. He's not the man your Felix is, for instance. He has a poor outlook on life and a character which might be called unstable."

"He's loyal to you."

"Uh-hum."

"There's a sort of stability in that."

"Uh-hum. Emotionally I should say he was a sort of bulldog. But that's because, perhaps, he's not been conditioned any by life. He knows the value of the few people that care for him."

"Who else beside you, Father?"

The bright-eyed cripple laughed in a low and taunting key. "About a dozen women, roughly speaking."

It silenced Lynda on that theme.

He put her himself into a taxicab, escorting her down through the house with its rumours of revelry and play. Jocelyn's secret life had been all most smothered out by its strong and ancient enemy, the conventional idea; and since her arrival in New York her mother had given the fire and verve of the girl nothing to feed upon except the one thing longing to escape.

Marcella should have moved even more rapidly. Now, with the front door of her life barred, Jocelyn had climbed out of a window in the immemorial fashioned of all failed adventurers. In these strange days and nights that followed her first escapade Jocelyn found herself saying, as she contemplated her two guardians with those changed eyes of hers: 'How can they be so blind? How can they be so blind?'

They were, however, more sensitive to her perhaps than she imagined. One evening Felix questioned her. Herebefore Jocelyn had been the questioner.

"Why," he asked her, "do you look so conventional tonight?"

Jocelyn was wearing white and her hair was sleek as an otter's skin about her smooth rich face.

"You used to say I didn't look as I ought to; conventional, that is."

"Tonight you do."

He went over to her, sat on the arm of her chair and bent over her, capturing her in one strong arm.

"Look, child, I have to be away from you for a fortnight, presently." Her heart went plunging, whether for joy or sorrow she could not tell for the life of her have told. "When I come back don't you think we could shorten this engagement of ours a little? I'm weary of convent alms. I want a wife."

Jocelyn's eyes leaped to her mother for aid, for rescue.

Marcella spoke in measure as though she were reciting.

"I can see no reason for keeping you waiting much longer, Felix. I did say a four months' engagement, but it seems to me that you have tested each other's affections now sufficiently, have had time to draw close to each other. Of course we must wait until the end of the Lenten season. It might be possible to arrange for a wedding then. While you are away in Arizona I shall go to the sisters. I will ask Cousin Sara Mullet to come and stay here with Jocelyn. I think the child will be glad to have this little interval of loneliness. She will be able to prepare herself for the great—for the happy change."

The girl looked from one to the other.

"You mean you'll both go away? You'll leave me alone here for all those days . . . before . . .?"

Felix bent to her lips. Before his own fell upon them he said in a low key, "Much safer for you, my darling, to be rid of me just now." And the kiss she dreaded fell upon her with the anguish of a blow.

Swiftly the thought came to her, "I shall be free. I shall be almost free."

"I don't think," she said and there was an echo in her voice of Nick Sandal's irony, "I don't remember that either of you has asked me what I want, have you?"

Felix laughed with tenderness. Marcella protested. "Jocelyn!"

Jocelyn turned to them, her face, bent down and her smiling eyes listed.

"I don't say no, Mother, And, Felix, I don't say yes."

Their faces locked into tyranny and anger, both controlled as out of indulgence to a child.

"But while you are both away," she confronted their tyranny with proud and secret eyes, "I—will—decide."

Events shaped themselves rapidly to make her quest for the truth possible. Cousin Sara came, an old woman with an ear trumpet, very active and very lame, who gaddled about the city all day with a passionate enthusiasm for shopping, and went to bed at night exhausted by her own nervous activity. To superintend Jocelyn's trousseau, to buy what must be bought, to stow it away, all this was a sort of wistful heaven to the poor old lady. She did not even begin to think of understanding Jocelyn.

After Felix had been gone four days—and Jocelyn rather anxiously recognized that she missed him—and after Marcella had been buried in her concern for as long a time, after Cousin Sara had settled in like some squirrel-creature to the routine of acquisition and repose, there came a night . . .

Mary's night out, when Jocelyn drew from her old trunk the pleated skirt and the small dark jacket and the tam-o'-shanter and ran her fingers through her hair.

It was a thick night with fog across the river and multitudinous voice of horns and bells, the lights all sphered to golden fruits: Alladin's garden, thought Jocelyn.

This time she found her father in the outer room of his lodging, alone. At her knock a footstep hurried to the door. It opened and Nick stood before her. He seemed for a flash disappointed at what he had found there on his threshold.

"I didn't expect to see you again," he said. "I thought you'd had enough."

"Enough? Father, I've been living to get back here. Are we alone?"

CHANGES BEING MADE IN TRENTON YOUTH DIES UNDER LOAD OF WOOD

Twenty-one-year-old Kenneth Moore, Trenton, was crushed to death when an automobile, loaded with cord wood, toppled over on him near the village of Stoco, five miles from Tweed, early Thursday evening. Moore was a passenger in an automobile driven by Gerald Wycott, also of Trenton, and it is believed Moore was outside of the vehicle attempting to prevent it from turning over when the heavy load shifted. He was instantly killed. Dr. M. G. Dales, Tweed, stated upon investigation.

A preliminary inquest was opened before Coroner Dr. Dales at Tweed, on Thursday evening, and following identification, the hearing was enlarged for one week. As a sequel to the inquest, however, Gerald Wycott was arrested on a charge of criminal negligence. The accused was arraigned before a Justice of the Peace and remanded in custody.

The accident occurred on a concession road near Stoco when the men were returning in Wycott's car, with a load of cordwood piled in the rear of a sedan. In some manner, the load is believed to have shifted, Moore getting out and proceeding to the low side of the vehicle to assist in the righting of the load. In some unaccountable manner the heavy vehicle toppled over into a six-foot ditch, pinning Moore beneath the vehicle as it dropped. He was badly crushed, police revealed upon releasing the body. Wycott escaped with minor injuries when the car turned over in the ditch.

The unfortunate young man is quite well known in Stirling, having resided here with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Norman Moore for a number of years. His father worked as a blacksmith for Mr. David Burkitt, and later operated a shop of his own on the south side of the creek on James Street.

The funeral was held on Sunday afternoon and was one of the largest ever held in Trenton. Interment was made in Trenton Cemetery.

BOY INJURED PLAYING RUGBY DIES AT BELLEVEILLE

Injured while playing rugby on Monday, Stuart Muirhead, Belleville, died in the Belleville General Hospital on Monday afternoon. The lad was a student of telegraphy in the Canadian Pacific telegraph office, and had only a few more months to go before finishing his course.

He was kicking a rugby ball around the field at the Queen Victoria school grounds on Sunday afternoon with a number of other boys. While jumping up for the ball he accidentally fell, injuring himself on the knee of a friend. He was taken home and later removed to the hospital. At the preliminary inquest held Monday evening, Dr. Cronk stated that the lad died from internal injuries suffered from a blow of some kind. Following the medical testimony the inquest was adjourned to October 28. Surviving are his father and mother, one sister, Jean, and one brother, Robert.

when the verger succeeded by a new one, it appeared that the verger was expected to keep certain church records. When the new vicar found that his verger could neither read nor write he felt himself forced to dispense with his services.

So the ex-verger set up in the retailing business with a barrow. He was so successful with that that he opened a shop. The shop was so successful that he was able to develop a chain of them and a growingly imposing bank balance.

His banker, however, became rather puzzled when he received no acknowledgment of the numerous company prospectuses which he sent to his client to help him in the investment of his fortune. Meeting him on the street one day, he asked him why he had not replied to his letters. The erstwhile verger told him he could neither read nor write.

"What would you not have been if you had been an educated man?" he exclaimed.

"I would," said the other, "have been a verger."

BEHIND THE HEADLINES OTTAWA

(By Dean Wilson)

Is it true that Canada is following a foreign policy which steps clear of complete isolation on one side and direct intervention on the other, being content to chart a "middle-of-the-road" course on an hour to hour basis in order to be on the most cordial and friendly terms with Japan, Italy and Germany? There is no doubt along Parliament Hill that this is the essence of the country's foreign policy at the present time, but the answer must be qualified by the important statement that Canada will not follow any course of international action which is not supported by either the United States or Great Britain, or both. Ottawa, London and Washington are exchanging information whenever there are common interests involved and they are proceeding along parallel lines without Canada losing her own independence of judgment and freedom of action, with the latter qualification being the basic reason why this country is providing adequate means of security against attack through the act of building up an armed force in face of the many assurances of full protection that have been issued from time to time by both John Bull and Uncle Sam. In other words, whatever foreign policy is adopted by these two friendly and powerful democracies towards Japan, Italy and Germany, it is quite likely that a similar attitude, with certain qualifications, will be taken by Canada. In the first place, notwithstanding all rumours or gossip to the contrary, whenever the British Commonwealth of Nations is engaged in an armed conflict, Canada is automatically involved in such an international struggle by all the rules that remain of international law and order. In the second place, it is impossible for Canada to remain absolutely neutral if the United States is engaged in any war because there is an unfortified frontier of over 3000 miles between the two neighbouring countries and no foreign power would miss such a strategic opportunity to strike in this vulnerable territory. Then again, the financial, diplomatic and sentimental reasons would be impelling forces against any policy of absolute neutrality.

Nevertheless, it is a remarkable page of the current history of this country that Canada has managed to keep out of the disputes which have been taking place between Japan, Germany and Italy and the democratic countries of the world, including Great Britain and the United States, though Canada's foreign policies have been proceeding along parallel lines to the democracies. It is apparent that Ottawa has not forgotten the importance of this country's large foreign trade which is today a vital factor in the proper maintenance of the customary standard of living of the people of this country.

Is there any justification for such a policy? There is no unanimity of opinion along Parliament Hill on this point, particularly in the case of Germany.

After the World War, Germany was excessively weak, physically, financially and politically, being discredited and bankrupt. However, following a few chaotic years, this nation readjusted itself and it reached a full capacity of pre-war production, with an official statement reporting that Germany's volume of exports during certain years has been greater than that of Great Britain and cry second to that of the United States. They exported moving machines, plowshares, all kinds of agricultural machinery, motion picture projectors, stainless steel, locomotives, trucks, Diesel engines, and many other articles. Canada is one of the nations which engage in a profitable and valuable trade with Germany, and the same is true of the economic relations between this country and Italy and Japan.

Why should Canada throw away these economic advantages? Those Canadians who demand a severance of relations with Japan, Italy and Germany, argue that trading with these countries, particularly allowing them to obtain raw materials and old metals, while it may provide temporary profits to many Canadians, yet it enriches these dictatorships and it encourages their programmes of illegal aggression or expansion against the best interests of the whole British Commonwealth of Nations. It is pointed out that such a policy is bound to lead and to culminate in persistent demands for more and more colonies, though it is a well-known fact that these militarists are distinguished for colonial mismanagement and incompetence. For example, the Germans ruled so badly in Southwest Africa that the native Hereros revolted in January, 1904, killing the German settlers and soldiers, but sparing all other white people. Furthermore, is it not possible that eventually these aggressive nations like Japan, Italy and Germany may not look in the direction of Canada in their process of expansion since it is no secret that this country is one of the few habitable countries in the world today that can receive millions and millions of settlers in any gigantic programme, particularly if these new settlers or invaders do not require a high standard of living?

There are many Canadians who are reluctant to throw away foreign trade, and there is even a strong reaction in this country in favour of a foreign policy which would enable Canada to profit from neutrality at all costs. They argue that the British Government became the great credit nation as a result of the neutral policies of the Franco-Prussian war of 1870, in which England was only a spectator supplying the needs of the combatants. They point out that United States played the role of a profitable bystander for two and one-half years during the World War of 1914 and this American Republic became the world's great credit nation. Why should not another great war enable Canada to become one of the great nations of the world? Canada has sufficient natural wealth and resource to accomplish it.

There is little doubt along Parliament Hill that Canada will not change her "middle-of-the-road" policy, which steps clear of isolation on one side and direct intervention on the other, being content to chart a course of what remains of international law and order. It means a foreign policy continued on an hour to hour basis unless some untoward "incident" necessitates a deviation which will cause the Government to summon a special session of the House of Commons. — (Reproduction Prohibited, 1938, Educational Features Syndicate).

CHANGE IN FEDERAL CABINET?

Cabinet changes are expected, and one of the rumours is to the effect that Dr. J. J. McCann, M.P., for South Renfrew, will succeed as Minister of Pensions the Hon. C. G. Power, who will go to the Senate or be made superintendent of the government printing bureau.

TEACH HORSES TO TROT

Horses don't trot naturally. They must be taught. The English raised the first trotters about 200 years ago. Light buggies were popular then and drivers couldn't manage galloping horses, so the more steady trot was developed. At first, says a writer in the Washington Post, only wealthy persons owned trotters and raced each other on public roads. Track races began about 100 years ago. Until 1905 when sulks came into use, drivers rode in saddles. Two minutes is good time for a mile trot.

NEW POSTAGE STAMP

A new 13-cent postage stamp, depicting the entrance to Halifax Harbor, will be issued November 15th. Hon. W. D. Euler, acting Postmaster-General announced. It will be double-sized and horizontally arranged, and its colour will be ultramarine. It was originally intended to issue the stamp completing the current King George VI. issue last June 15, when others of the series were issued, but it was delayed on account of difficulty experienced in fitting in a suitable design with the general plan followed in the new issue.

FARMHAND GETS 15 YEARS IN COBBOURG CASE

Harold Oliver, 20-year-old farmhand from Hamilton Township, was sentenced to 15 years in penitentiary on a charge of wounding Mrs. Edith Parker, farmwife, and to five years concurrent on a charge of setting fire to her home.

A charge of rape against Oliver was transferred to the next Assizes, the Crown intimating it would be withdrawn. Defence Counsel F. C. Richardson announced he would appeal the sentences.

Oliver was convicted on Thursday of the assault charge, it originally having been one of attempted murder. He pleaded guilty to the fire-setting charge. All three charges arose from an incident July 21, when Oliver is said to have entered the Parker home, attacked Mrs. Parker with an axe and then forced her 19-year-old daughter, Josephine, into another room, where she too was assaulted. Before he left the house he cut the telephone wires and left a burning cigarette on the couch.

DODGE'S DEATH HELD ACCIDENTAL

A coroner's jury on Monday returned a verdict of "accidental death by drowning" at the inquest into the death of 21-year-old Daniel Dodge, Detroit automobile millionaire. Chief witness was the young widow, who gave her evidence in a low but steady voice. She was excused from the proceedings immediately upon concluding her testimony and hurried from the room, shielding her face from photographers.

The story of how young Dodge received severe injuries in a dynamite explosion at his summer home near Little Current, on August 15, and later toppled into the rough waters of Georgian Bay while being taken in his speedboat to Little Current, was told by Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Bryant, and Frank Vallquette, employees of Dodge, who corroborated the evidence of Mrs. Dodge. It was revealed at the first session of the inquest, which was adjourned pending Mrs. Dodge's recovery, that the young millionaire would have recovered from his injuries had he reached the hospital. This statement was based on a medical examination of the body.

LIBEL NOTICE SERVED DREW

Formal notice under the Libel Act has been served on Colonel George A. Drew, K.C., Toronto; Maclean's Magazine, Toronto; and Napier Moore, Maclean's editor, by the John Inglis Company, Toronto, in connection with Colonel Drew's article on the Bren Gun contract in that magazine last September.

Similar notice has been served on the Financial Post, Toronto, which published comment on the Bren contract subsequent to the Maclean's article.

The legal firm of Blake, Lash, Casels & Anglin, Toronto, acted for the Inglis Company in serving the notices mentioned to protect the company's legal rights should it decide to sue those mentioned for libel.

The law requires that formal notice must be served within six weeks of the occurrence of the alleged libel, and thereafter formal court action for libel must be begun within three months. The Inglis Company has until early in January to sue those mentioned.

No comment was forthcoming from any of the principals in the case. It was pointed out that there has been no announcement of actual decision to sue.

ENTRANCE EXAMINATIONS

Major changes in the high school entrance examinations for 1939 were announced recently by Dr. McGregor Easson, secretary of the Ottawa High School Entrance Board.

The principal changes are: Examinations in five subjects instead of nine.

More importance is attached to the pupil's general ability to interpret English Literature.

More emphasis is placed on mathematical skill.

Four examinations will be written, while in addition, one of the papers will be marked for writing ability. The written examinations will be English literature, composition and grammar, spelling, mathematics.

First Change in Years

These are the first changes of any importance in the examination system for many years. "For the last thirty years there has been very little change," stated Dr. Easson.

The changes are necessitated by, and are in line with the changes made in the curriculum of the elementary schools this year.

In Two Groups

As under the old system, there are two groups for subjects taught. Formerly the groups were: Group one: hygiene, nature study and art; group two: arithmetic, grammar, composition, literature, history, geography, spelling, writing and oral reading.

Under the new system oral reading has been dropped. Geography and history go into group one under the general heading of social studies. Grammar and composition, as closely related subjects, becomes combined. Arithmetic, extended somewhat, takes the new title of mathematics.

The new group one is composed of: social studies, science, health, music, art, crafts, home economics and agriculture. In the old group one, pupils in the inspected schools were nearly always recommended by their teachers, though examinations were set by the Ontario department of education for pupils from uninspected schools and other special cases. The new group two is composed of the five subjects in which there are examinations.

The new regulations do not specify what will be the procedure for uninspected schools for group one. For the inspected schools, however, there will be no examinations, but principles will be required to furnish certificates to the High School Entrance Board stating that candidates have satisfactorily covered the course of study.

The system of admission by recommendations by teachers will be continued as far as the group two studies are concerned.

Ability in Understanding

With the change in English literature examination, no longer will the pupil be able to "cram". The paper will be based entirely on sight passages; that is, his ability in understanding literature in general will be tested by asking him to explain passages he may never have seen before.

Marks on the examinations will be apportioned as follows: literature, 100; composition and grammar, 100; spelling, 50; writing, 50; mathematics, 100. Forty per cent of the marks in each subject and 60 per cent of the aggregate will be a pass, providing the candidate has a certificate that he has covered the course in the subjects of group one. — Winchester Press.

WE NEED YOUR HELP— THIS YEAR! EVERY YEAR!

Needy children from all over the Province are treated regardless of race, creed or financial circumstance.

This policy has been continued for over 60 years in the firm belief that everyone who understands the facts would want this great work to continue . . . would agree that no Ontario child should be denied a chance for health or escape from deformity if mere money makes the difference.

Over 95% of our beds are in Public Wards.

The Hospital receives no support from the Toronto Federation for Community Service because patients are accepted from all parts of the Province.

We must therefore appeal to a humane and generous public to take care of an annual deficit . . . this year it is $68,000.00.

Please mail a donation to the Appeal Secretary, 67 College Street, Toronto.

The thanks of little children will be your reward.

The Hospital for Sick Children

Every morning in the year famous surgeons come to our operating rooms to donate their services. More than 8,100 operations are performed annually. But there are many extra lives saved and the maintenance of this necessary service is very costly.

Since 1928 the service rendered by the always-overflowing Out-Patient Department has more than doubled. Last year 24,416 individual treatments were given. This service yields a small revenue—but not nearly enough.

WILLIAM WALLACE HUBBLE

William Wallace Hubble died very suddenly following a brief illness on Saturday, October 15th, at his home on the 8th concession of Murray, in his eighty-first year. He was born at Hubble Hill, now known as Mount Pleasant, in Rawdon Township, and was a son of the late Myer Hubble and Nancy Revol. Early in life he married Miss Mary Ann Jackman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roger Jackman, seventh concession of Rawdon, and this union was blessed with three children — Ernest Hubble, who resides in Murray Township, Ross Hubble, on the homestead, and one daughter Pearl, (Mrs. Walter Grass, who died about twenty years ago). His second wife was Miss Hannah Maybee, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Barzilla Maybee, of Stockdale and she predeceased him sixteen years ago. No children were born to this union, but in infancy Selbourne Theed was adopted and he now resides in Toronto. Later a niece, Miss Wreta Jackman came to live at the Hubble farm and she is now married and in a home of her own. Mr. Hubble was one of a family of eight and he is survived by one sister, Mrs. Will Jackman, of Stirling, and one brother, Mr. Wallington Hubble, of Brandon, Manitoba. There also survives several grandchildren, great grandchildren and a host of nieces and nephews who all loved their uncle Wallace. Deceased was a kind Christian gentleman, a good neighbour, a progressive farmer and a loyal supporter of Tabernacle United Church, Murray, and the L.O.L. and Masonic Lodges.

The funeral service was held in Stockdale United Church on Monday, October 17th, and a large concourse of sorrowing relatives and friends were in attendance to pay their tribute of respect to one who had been such a friend to all. Three-quarters of the church was filled with mourners. His pastor, Rev. A. C. Poulter, of Wooler circuit, assisted by Rev. F. Lane, of Stockdale, conducted the service and the choir rendered an old favourite. Interment was made in Stockdale Cemetery. — Con.

BLUENOSE RETAINS TITLE

Bluenose of Lunenburg, pride of the Nova Scotian fishing fleet, successfully defended the international fisherman's trophy by defeating the Gloucester fleet, off Boston on Wednesday, in the decisive race of their series. The fifth and deciding contest, breaking a tie after each schooner had scored two victories, was the most exciting and hard-fought of the series.

TWEED WINS

Tweed High School made it two straight wins over their smart Stirling High School rivals in an interscholastic rugby game at Tweed Agricultural Grounds on Friday afternoon, winning by a score of 16-6. The first quarter saw the visitors go into the lead by virtue of an outside kick by R. Richardson which resulted in a touchdown. They were held scoreless by the locals until the third quarter when Richardson kicked a single point.

G. Wager, Luffman and Courneyea were the point-getters for Tweed, each crossing Stirling line for a major score, none of which were converted. Wager also kicked a single point.

RAWDON BOYS FETED

Rawdon Municipal Hall was the scene of a happy gathering on Wednesday evening, October 19th, when about two hundred people from the surrounding communities of Bethel and Springbrook, gathered to pay tribute to Messrs Bill and Don Heath, on the occasion of their recent marriage. All enjoyed a round of community singing with Mrs. Harold Elliott at the piano and Misses Edna Stillman, Evelyn Bailey and Irene Tucker leading in the singing. Rev. J. E. Beckel was chairman for the occasion and gave a jovial address, wishing the newlyweds much happiness on their matrimonial venture. Master Gerald Scott sang a number and Miss Bessie McMullen recited a humorous selection. Master Bobby Elliott sang a solo, "When I marry you," with local hits. Mr. Norman Leury gave a harmonica selection. Mrs. Harold Elliott and Miss Laura Tucker delighted with a piano duet, "Waves of the Ocean." The two bridal couples were given seats of honour on the platform and the brides made a charming picture in their wedding gowns of white chiffon velvet. Miss Edna Stillman read the following address:

Harold, Ontario,
October 19th, 1938

Mr. and Mrs. William Heath
Dear Bill and Frances:
It is with great joy that we assemble here this evening to do honour to whom honour is due and to offer our "congratulations and best wishes" on the occasion of your recent marriage. Bill, you have grown from childhood to manhood in our midst and you have been a faithful friend and neighbour and a real sport in all community interests, as a baseball fan and leader in Junior Farmers. We especially welcome you, Frances, to our community, and feel that you will be willing to help whenever you can and we hope you will feel quite at home among us as we join together in good fellowship. As a token of our esteem, we at this time ask you both to please accept this studio couch, not for its value, but rather that it may often remind you of our friendship and best wishes for your future happiness.

Signed on behalf of the Community — Edwin Faulkner, George Runnalls, Lorne Bailey, Gordon Green and Ray Sine.

Edwin and George made the presentation and both Bill and Frances thanked their friends for the lovely gift.

Miss Blanche Wright read the second address:

Harold, Ontario
October 19th, 1938

Mr. and Mrs. Don Heath
Dear Don and Marion,—

We have gathered together this evening to express to you our heartiest congratulations on your recent marriage. We extend to you and Marion our best wishes upon the life partnership which you have so happily entered. We are especially glad to know that you are going to reside in our midst. We all, Don, are acquainted with your generous acts of kindness wherever you go, and although some of us are not so well acquainted with you, Marion, however, it is sufficient for us that Don has chosen you as a life partner and co-worker. We heartily welcome you, Marion, and wish for you the best of everything in your married life. As a token of our sincere esteem and respect we ask you both to accept this studio couch and as you use it, may it remind you of your many friends.

Signed on behalf of the community — Ray Sine, Gordon Green, Lorne Bailey, George Runnalls, Edwin Faulkner.

The presentation was made by Gordon and Ray, after which both Marion and Don expressed their thanks.

The couches were upholstered in rust velvet, and were appropriate gifts.

All sang "For They are Jolly Good Fellows". An appetizing lunch topped off with lemonade was served and those in attendance enjoyed a social half hour together.

In failing health for several years.

The late Mr. Burke, who was born at Marmora, Ont., on April 7, 1866, had been a school teacher for more than half a century. He retired in 1934 with 51 years of teaching to his credit, and of this more than 41 years was in the three Ottawa Schools in which he had served as principal. He also taught school in the Peterboro district and at Calgary, Alta.

A man of great vigor, the late Mr. Burke had taught many boys who in later years ranked high among the citizens of the community. Among his former scholars are many priests, lawyers, doctors and business men. Among others, he taught Frank "King" Clancy, Ottawa's best known hockey star.

When Mr. Burke retired from teaching in July, 1934, he was principal of St. Patrick's school. In December of the same year he ran for separate school trustee in Wellington ward and was elected for a two-year term by a majority of 184 over W. H. Perault, the sitting trustee. However, Mr. Burke was unable to complete the term as ill health forced him to retire several months later.

As a young man of 17 Mr. Burke began his teaching career in the Peterboro District. In 1889 he came to Ottawa and was attached to St. Joseph's school. Two years later he went to Calgary where he taught for two years, and then he returned to Peterboro district where he taught school until 1895 when he returned to Ottawa and became principal of St. Brigid's school. He was 23 years at St. Brigid's school, then was transferred to St. Joseph's and for the final 10 years of his career he was at St. Patrick's school. During his term with the Ottawa separate schools his pupils won many scholarships.

A keen follower of sports Mr. Burke believed in young boys participating in games of all kinds. He always taught his boys to play the game to win, but win or lose, to be sportsmen first, last and always. More than 35 years ago Mr. Burke introduced music into the schools of Ottawa, he receiving credit for starting this branch of studies which has assumed an important place on all local school time tables.

It was the late Mr. Burke's patience and teaching ability that made his son, Captain Desmond Burke, the outstanding Canadian rifle shot that he is. Capt. Burke won the King's Prize at Bisley in 1924 when only 19 years of age. It was just two years prior to this that Capt. Burke began shooting under the direction of his father. The late Mr. Burke taught his son how to handle the rifle properly then, with great patience, taught him to hold it steady on an object for minutes at a time. One method used to help his son was to place a yardstick against the rifle barrel and have Capt. Burke hold the rifle there without movement. In the intervening years, Capt. Burke has made the Canadian Bisley team twelve times, this being two short of the record for any single marksman.

The late Mr. Burke's parents, John Burke and his wife, Sarah Downs, were natives of Ireland who came to this country and settled near Marmora. The late Mr. Burke was a devout Catholic and a member of the League of the Sacred Heart, the Holy Name Society and of Emerald Court, Catholic Order of Foresters.

Surviving him are his widow, the former Mary Connolly; twin sons, Captain Desmond Burke, M.D., of Ottawa; and Edmund Burke, of Montreal; two daughters, Mrs. John Langdon, of Montreal, and Miss Dorothea Burke, of Department of Mines and Resources, at home; one brother, John Burke, of Saint Ste. Marie; two sisters, Mrs. James Fitzpatrick, Stirling, Ont.; and Mrs. Charles Jandrew, Franktown, Ont.; and one grandson, William Burke, son of Capt. Burke.

The funeral took place from the family residence at 7.45 o'clock, on Wednesday morning to Blessed Sacrament church for solemn requiem high mass at eight o'clock. Burial in Notre Dame cemetery.

ANNUAL Y. P. RALLY HELD

Young Canadians go to fight or go to jail for refusing to go. It was pointed out in the discussion that Jesus would not fight. Rev. Manson Doyle, D.D., of Toronto, conducted the discussion period. A very bountiful supper was served by the members of the Young People's League at Bethel.

The evening session began at 7.30 p.m. The Church was filled with young people. Rev. S. L. Osborne, who is an accomplished musician, led the convention in singing of different types of songs: The Holloway Young People's Union, of Belleville, took charge of the worship service.

The report of the nominating committee was given. The new President is Mr. Robert Smithrim, of Trenton. Miss Margaret Reynolds, of Corbyville, was re-appointed Secretary and Treasurer. The new officers were installed by Rev. J. V. Robins, of Trenton. The closing theme address was given by Rev. Manson Doyle, of Toronto. It was in the form of a challenge to the Christian youth of today to seek to solve the problems of our present day civilization. The next convention will be held in Holloway St., Belleville.

Convention closed with the Benediction by Rev. H. Herrington, Thomasburg.

NEW 1939 CAR LINES HIT ALL-TIME HIGH STATES LOCAL DEALER

The man who buys a 1939 automobile will be getting the greatest value-per-dollar in motoring history, for the new models set an all-time high in luxury, power and safety, according to Mr. E. G. Bailey, prominent local citizen and dealer in Chevrolet and Oldsmobile passenger cars and Chevrolet Trucks. Mr. Bailey has just returned from a visit to Oshawa, where he was a guest at a special dealers' showing, staged by General Motors' Products of Canada, Limited, of the new 1939 Chevrolet and Oldsmobile models.

"Never in my years in the motor car business have I been so impressed by the quality and value built into a product as I was when I viewed the 1939 models," said Mr. Bailey. "Striking new body styling is probably the most evident outward change, but in the case of our own Chevrolet and Oldsmobile at least, the refinements in 'ride' performance on the road and mechanical innovations are equally impressive. The new type of gear-shift on the steering column is obtainable on all our models; knee action is standard on Chevrolet Master Deluxe models and both Oldsmobile Six and Eight, and there are important changes in clutch, springing and steering."

"In view of these tremendous advances in motor car design and operation," added Mr. Bailey, "I feel confident that during 1939 the automotive industry in Canada will contribute to, and share in, the general business improvement which is already apparent throughout the Dominion."

Dealers attending the private showing were welcomed by the following head office executives of General Motors Products of Canada, Ltd., at Oshawa: Messrs Carmichael, McLaughlin, McTavish, Buchard, Carnsworth and many others.
